A SPECIAL MADNESS

TOFINO — Have you ever been afflicted by a malady known as "West Coast Madness?"

Residents of this village say the madness exists, but only afflicts people who visit Long Beach in Pacific Rim National Park or adjacent west coast areas.

Bert Braiden, who is developing a camping complex to eventually contain 1,000 sites, says some people seem to go berserk when they come within sight and sound of the open Pacific.

"I'm sure this wilderness coast does something to some people," he said. "They get out of their trailers or campers and holler and throw their arms around. Some literally go wild when they reach the beach."

But sociologist Daniel Koenig of the University of British Columbia, says the behavior of some people in the wilderness areas has nothing to do with the environment.

"They are pre-conditioned to act that way," he explained. "That is they want freedom and when they have reached their objective they let go."

Strict Controls For Travel Firms

Legislation placing strict controls on travel agencies and tour operators in B.C. will be introduced in the spring session of the legislature.

Consumer Services Minister Phyllis Young said Friday the legislation, now being prepared by her department in conjunction with the representatives of the travel industry, will undoubtedly include mandatory licensing of all tour operations and travel agencies.

Without licensing it would be almost impossible to control the industry, she said.

Details of the legislation are still being discussed, she said, but agencies will likely be required to place money in trust funds each year to protect consumers in case of bankruptcy or other financial difficulties.

Young said reputable travel agencies want to be included in legislation because controls are necessary to protect legitimate tours, now being jeopardized by the publicity given tours in difficulty.

The recent troubles of Travellers International, which went bankrupt in December, and AirClub International, which ran into difficulties with U.S. federal aviation authorities, prompted the B.C. government to draft new legislation, said Young.

B.C. is looking closely at new legislation in Ontario designed to protect consumers by controlling the travel industry, said Young, and that legislation may be the model for B.C.'s new licensing and registration.

PCs Push Pension Boosts

OTTAWA (CP) — The Progressive Conservatives launched a concerted effort Friday to improve the lot of old age pensioners, convincing the government to yield ground on at least one point.

Bud Cullen, parliamentary secretary for finance, said Friday the government will adopt a change advocated by George Whittaker (PC, Okanagan-Boundary). It will make pensions available to some armed forces veterans who do not qualify.

A small number of veterans are prevented from collecting pension benefits at 65 because of residency requirements.

All persons who have lived in Canada for the 10 years preceding their 65th birthday qualify automatically. But different regulations apply to those who have spent lengthy periods out of the country. In some cases veterans are affected.

There is no exemption for time spent outside Canada for armed forces service.

Whittaker argued that this is discriminatory and Cullen agreed.

Legislation to correct this defect will be introduced, hopefully before the current session of Parliament ends in June, he said.

He said only a small number of veterans will be affected by the change.

Meanwhile, Don Munro (PC-Esquimalt-Saanich) urged that income and sales taxes be abolished for all senior citizens in an effort to restore public faith in saving.

Inflation has undermined the incentive to save and high government spending has diminished the importance of putting away money for retirement years, he argued.

He said his proposal would extend to the income pensioners get from capital gains. Such a system would reduce "government-forced dependency on everyone."

Ford Budget $50 Billion In the Red

WASHINGTON (UPI) President Ford announced today he will submit a $349 billion federal budget with a planned deficit of $52 billion for the 1976 fiscal year. He appealed to Congress "to walk the extra mile with me" to restore the nation's economic health.

The budget will be officially submitted to Congress Monday.

"It is a big budget, calling for expenditures of $349 billion — almost a billion dollars a day during the year starting next July 1," Ford said.

Ford disclosed the basic figures today along with a strong defence of his decisions at an otherwise off-the-record news briefing by administration officials at the state department.

"It will result in a large deficit for the year — $52 billion — and this deficit, large as it is, would increase by another $17 billion to nearly $70 billion if the Congress does not agree to all of the reductions I have requested in this budget."

Ford noted that the the government already is anticipating red ink spending of about $30 billion in the current fiscal year.

"I do not like to see deficits of this size" and "I know most Americans agree" with his feelings, the president said.

But he added: "I am resolved to take those steps that will make such deficits unnecessary in the future. That requires, most of all, restoration of a vigorous economy in this country, but we must be realistic."

Ford said that "in times like these" it is necessary to increase spending for aid to the unemployed while trying to generate "a measured amount of additional stimulus" to the economy through a tax reduction and he said his budget, along with his proposals for energy conservation, would do that.

"It is equally essential that we not rekindle the fires of inflation," he said.

"I, of course, will work very closely with the Congress in all of these matters. I will walk the extra mile and give all of my strength to getting the national economy in shape."

ON-THE-SPOT conference was held early today near Johnson Street Bridge between Jim Walker, right, president of striking city outside workers union, and members of Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers Union. Walker said CP Rail was given a pass to take seven empty boxcars across bridge, as they constituted a fire hazard sitting in the yard, but railway workers were concerned the action would constitute crossing a picket line. Everything was worked out, Walker said, and train was waved across the bridge by a city engineer at 10:30 a.m. (John McKay photo)

CLEANED OUT

VANCOUVER (CP) — A 45-year-old Calgary man was cleaned out of $600 Thursday by two women who offered to take a bath with him.

The victim told police he met the women in a beer parlor and all three returned to his hotel room.

The women suggested they take a communal bath, he said, so he undressed and went into the bathroom to fill the tub. The women said they would join him after a minute.

A few seconds later, he found the door locked. When he got out, his pants pockets were empty along with his wallet, which had contained $600.

Unconscious Girl Found

Colwood RCMP are asking help from the public in identifying a girl found unconscious beside the Trans-Canada Highway near Millstream Friday evening.

The girl, thought to be 16 to 20 years old, remains unconscious and in poor condition at Victoria General Hospital today—with probable head injuries.

Const. Wendal Milne of the general investigation squad based at Colwood said the girl was spotted lying beside the highway by a passing motorist about 6 p.m. Friday.

She is described as five feet two inches tall, of slim build, with blue eyes and light brown hair past her shoulders. She was wearing green slacks, a green car coat with hood and had a silver signet ring with the letter S scratched on it.

Police asked that anyone able to assist identifying her call Colwood RCMP at 388-3123 or 388-3371.

Gilmour Out In School Row

Saanich and the Greater Victoria School Board will be in a legal position early next week to lock out employees, after government mediator Clark Gilmour withdrew from both disputes Friday.

Gilmour filed his report on mediation efforts between the school board and the 278 maintenance workers, members of Local 382 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, after a 20-minute negotiation meeting Friday afternoon.

School board spokesman Bill Stavdal said Gilmour had been asked to withdraw by CUPE negotiators earlier this week, but had decided to stay on the job until Friday.

Stavdal said the board will be in a legal lockout position by Monday or Tuesday. Inside school board workers are still involved in mediation and another meeting with negotiators and Gilmour is scheduled for Monday.

Saanich asked Gilmour to withdraw from the municipality's dispute with the 375 members of CUPE Local 374 after a meeting Friday produced no results.

Local 374 president Jim Brett said the union is prepared for a lockout which could come Tuesday or Wednesday.

He said the union proposed at the Friday meeting that workers be given parity with people doing similar jobs in Victoria's private sector, but the municipality rejected the proposal.

"It seems this route (lockout) was laid down some time ago and we have been able to do nothing to offset it," Brett said.

The Saanich union has not yet taken a strike vote, and Brett said there are no immediate plans to do so.

Gilmour's withdrawal from the Saanich and school board maintenance staff disputes, leaves only Esquimalt, Sidney and the school board's inside workers still involved in mediation efforts.

IRA Raids Resume

BELFAST (UPI) — The British army, abandoning hope of a cease-fire in Ulster, today launched its toughest security clamp-down in two months with a series of predawn raids on Irish Republican Army strongholds.

The army said six suspects were seized in the raids which came less than 12 hours after IRA ambushers shot and killed a policeman and injured another in a machine-gun attack at Donaghmore, 35 miles west of Belfast.

British army officials said the security raids on Belfast's new lodge area, a centre of the Provisional wing of the outlawed IRA, aimed at countering a further escalation of violence.

Barrett Rips Into Oil Firms

CALGARY (CP) — Premier Dave Barrett told a cheering audience here that Canadians can develop their own natural resources without the help of multi-national corporations.

Barrett, who was interrupted 41 times by applause and four standing ovations, told more than 1,000 people at the Alberta New Democratic Party convention that Alberta and Canada should tell Syncrude and other oil companies to "get out of the oil sands."

The standing-room only crowd, which spilled out of the main convention room at the Palliser Hotel and into the lobby, was one of the most enthusiastic seen by the B.C. premier since his upset election win two and a half years ago.

He ripped into multi-national oil companies for price gouging and said oil companies should not be able to control 90 per cent of Canada's non-renewable resources.

The companies are guilty of making extravagant profits at the expense of consumers, he said, citing profit reports for three major companies which showed massive increases in net earnings since 1972.

He said he was "embarrassed" by television reports that federal energy minister Donald Macdonald was "waiting by the telephone for a call from the oil companies to see if they would do Canada a favor and develop the oil sands."

"It's our country, our oil, and they're borrowing money, our money, from Canadian banks to pay for it.

"Let us all, all the provinces, tiny Prince Edward Island, friendly British Columbia, happy Alberta, let us all develop the oil sands.

"Let's do it together—let's do it ourselves."

He repeated that British Columbia would join any federal policy which would put all energy resources in the hands of public Crown corporations.

But, in an interview following his speech, Barrett also repeated earlier statements that British Columbia would not participate in the Syncrude consortium as it presently stands because of the involvement by oil companies.

Using an analogy he nor-

NEWS BRIEFS

5 Arrested

MONTREAL (CP) — Five persons were arrested Friday in connection with the Jan. 21 deaths of 13 persons at a north-east district night club, a police spokesman said.

"I won't talk about it," the spokesman said. "The five have been caught. The case is closed. The killings have been resolved and you will learn all about it at the inquest."

'Slasher' Toll 9

Clyde Hay, 31, an employee of the National Cash Register Co., was killed late Thursday or early Friday in an old apartment house in a modest Hollywood neighborhood, police said.

CKLG Strike

VANCOUVER (CP) — Employees of radio station CKLG set up picket lines outside the station today. The station was broadcasting a taped message by an announcer that union members would remain out until a contract is signed. Members originally voted to go on strike last Sunday, however, delayed action.

Spill Fine $500

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Norwegian bulk carrier, the Hoegh Miranda, was fined $500 Thursday for spilling 135 gallons of bunker oil into Burrard Inlet.

4 Die in Plane

HOUSTON (UPI) — A chartered plane carrying land development customers on a flight from Oklahoma today was stripped of its wings in a collision with power lines near the Houston Intercontinental Airport and fell into a sparsely wooded field. Investigators said four of 14 persons aboard were killed.

Hurricane in Fiji

SUVA, Fiji (AP) — Hurricane winds of 140 miles an hour destroyed several villages in the Lau islands in eastern Fiji today.

ONLY HIS PRAISE CROSSED PICKETS

Friday was the last working day of Robert Davidson, chief administrative officer of the Victoria provincial court. He retired after 35 years as a Victoria policeman, court officer and court clerk.

His longtime friend and working companion Judge William Ostler made a special point of announcing Davidson's departure at the start of the court session on Friday.

But Davidson wasn't there to hear the kind words and praises for a job well done. A member of the B.C. Government Employees Union, he would not cross the picket line.

Ostler said Davidson's contributions to the court system as it has developed and grown over the years has "excited the admiration of us all".

The government has made no announcement yet on who will replace Davidson.

Japanese City Stoically Awaits Predicted Quake

KAWASAKI, Japan (WP) — The citizens of this industrial city were officially informed Friday night that they are living at the centre of a likely earthquake zone with disastrous possibilities. They took the explanations calmly, almost stoically, and prepared to go about their business until the predictions come true or are proven wrong.

The unprecedented turnout of about 2,000 people in the city auditorium was evidence of Kawasaki's concern. Many people sat on the edge of their chairs as an earthquake scientist and city officials explained the prospects and countermeasures. But there was little emotion, and no sign that any of the residents are planning to pull up stakes and move elsewhere.

Kawasaki is a densely populated industrial and bedroom city sandwiched between Tokyo and Yokohama. Its population has quadrupled in the postwar era to a total of 1 million people crowded into small apartments and tiny houses amid the belching smokestacks of oil refineries and other heavy industrial works.

A few months ago a technical survey of National Highway 15 — the famed old Tokaido Road immortalized by the woodblock prints of Hiroshige — discovered the strange fact that parts of the area have risen almost two inches in the past four years. Scientists attributed this bulge to pressures beneath the earth. Combined with historical evidence and other factors, the government's earthquake is likely to hit the area within a year or two, with Kawasaki city as its centre.

The council announced its findings late last month in an effort to warn the citizenry and prevent the spread of rumors. The people of Kawasaki were taken aback by the news and began calling, writing and stopping by city hall, police and fire stations and other municipal offices asking for information and advice.

The city's response was to organize a week-long series of "earthquake information rallies," the largest and most important of which took place in the city auditorium Friday night. Introduced by a properly bowing ward chief who referred to the "big shock" which everyone had suffered, the evening featured explanations by Prof. Hiroshi Takahashi of the earthquake forecast council, a question-and-answer session with the chiefs of city departments and a sometimes-grisly 30-minute film featuring previous disasters which have struck earthquake-prone Japan.

The professor explained the basis for the council's prediction, and said the chances seemed good that the quake will register not more than 4 or 5 on the Japanese scale of 7.

Soviet Missiles Sent to Iraq

Times News Services

The Soviet Union has delivered surface-to-surface missiles with conventional warheads to Iraq in a new escalation of the arms race in the Persian Gulf, according to authoritative Arab sources and Western intelligence reports.

The Russian decision to supply Baghdad with long-range SCUD missiles is expected by military exports to increase sharply the tension between Iraq and neighboring Iran, which is buying billions of dollars of sophisticated American arms.

Iraq and Iran have clashed periodically across their disputed frontier in the past two years. Hostility between the two large oil producers had risen greatly in the past year because of the Kirdish rebellion in northeastern Iraq.

Iran is openly supplying the Kirdish forces, led by Gen. Mullah Mustafa Barzani, with weapons in the Kirdish fight for self-rule. Iranian troops are reportedly operating artillery guns inside Iraq to help the Kurds.

The increasing Iranian intervention in Kurdistan triggered an Iraqi call to the Russians last month for heavy artillery and advanced MiG fighter-bombers, which have also begun arriving in Baghdad now, according to Arab sources.

New groups of Russian military technicians have also been seen in Iraq and are assumed by western sources to be the crews that will man the SCUD missiles, which are likely to remain under Russian control. The exact type and number of SCUDs supplied to Baghdad are not known, but their operational range is believed to be about 300 miles.

Meanwhile, the United States is stalling weapons supply deals with Israel until Secretary of State Henry Kissinger convinces the Jewish state to agree to territorial pullbacks in the Sinai, the Israeli national radio said today.

And Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko flies to Syria today from a tour of the Arab nations aimed at emphasizing Moscow's participation in Middle East peace-making efforts.

Rebels Near Capital

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — Communist-led rebels today pushed heavy attacks on all sides of the Cambodian capital with fighting reported only two miles from the city in what military sources said was the second phase of an offensive to strangle Phnom penh.

SHE'S CARRYING TORCH FOR '75 CANADA GAMES

Victoria High secondary student Linda Chiu has been selected official torch bearer for a Canada Games ceremony at 2 p.m. Sunday at the Legislative Buildings.

The ceremony will mark the official entry of the Canada Games torch into British Columbia on its cross-Canada tour, ending Feb. 11 at the games in Lethbridge.

The torch was lit by Prime Minister Trudeau Jan. 6 from the Centennial Flame in Ottawa and was carried to 34 cities before arriving in Victoria.

From here it goes to Vancouver, Whitehorse, Inuvik, Yellowknife and then down through Alberta, arriving at Lethbridge.

Miss Chiu, 16, of 721 Queens Avenue, is a member of the 1975 B.C. Canada Games volleyball team.

The grade 11 student was selected in 1974 as a provincial volleyball all-star.

Representing the provincial government at the ceremony will be Agriculture Minister David Stupich.

Preceding the ceremony, a special concert will be played on the Netherlands Centennial Carillon by provincial carillonneur Herman Bergink, starting at 1:30 p.m.

Songs will include Go, British Columbia, the province's centennial song.

mally uses to describe B.C. mineral resources, Barrett said oil "won't rot if it stays in the ground for awhile."

"There is no 24-hour national emergency for oil," he said. "This country can get by without a mad rush by the oil companies to develop this oil."

"That oil is like money in the bank. It is something that will make a return on the investment as soon as it can be produced. We can wait until we can do it ourselves and we will start making money the second we start producing."

"The oil companies didn't plant that oil in the ground," he said. "We don't want their charity, their paternalism. We want to be left alone, to muddle through ourselves."

In a policy resolution earlier, the convention called for the nationalization of Imperial Oil Co. Ltd., the largest oil and energy corporation in Canada, by the Alberta and Canadian governments.

A policy resolution adopted by the energy panel of the party's 12th annual provincial convention won unanimous approval following 45 minutes of at times bitter debate.

Two amendments calling for nationalization of a major oil company, without naming Imperial Oil, and another which called for nationalization of a company such as Imperial, were defeated.

APPEAL OPENS HEART MONTH

Heart Month begins today and in Greater Victoria it means the start of a campaign to raise $100,000, ammunition in the fight against Canada's number one health hazard.

Heart disease afflicted 2,607,000 Canadians in 1973. In 1971 it killed 78,421 Canadians. It will strike one person in four between the ages of 34 and 64, says the B.C. Heart Foundation.

The foundation's annual Heart Fund brings together medical and lay people working to conquer heart disease through research, education and community aid.

Three Victoria doctors are among 27 researchers at work in B.C. on projects funded by the heart foundation.

Dr. Richard Brownlee, head of the open heart surgery unit at Royal Jubilee Hospital, has a $14,000 grant to study materials for mitral heart valve replacement.

Dr. Glenn Friesen has a $5,625 grant to investigate heart output, circulation time and left ventricular function in coronary artery disease.

Dr. Charles Rich is using a $2,000 grant to examine more precise ways of measuring heart activity as it is recorded by movement of the heart against the chest wall and movement of neck arteries.

Mrs. Marianne Hanson, the foundation's co-ordinator on Vancouver Island, said Friday that about 1,720 canvassers will start in mid-month on a door-to-door business and residential campaign through Greater Victoria.

Last year's campaign objective of $65,000 was surpassed by $10,000. This year the target is $100,000. Across the province the goal is $850,000.

Besides research funding, contributions support a foundation film library which provides schools with educational movies and hospitals with teaching film.

The foundation also produces a variety of pamphlets aimed at educating the public to various aspects and preventative measures concerning heart disease.

Through a community aid program, it finances some patients who require out-of-town treatment for heart problems.

members of CUPE Local 511 have decided not to work overtime, supervisory personnel will be making the weekend inspections of such facilities as pumping stations.

Oak Bay is now in a legal lockout position, but no action is expected this weekend.

Mayor Brian Smith said the no-overtime decision could mean trouble in the event of a snowfall because only a handful of supervisors would be on hand over the weekend to sand the more hazardous hills in the district.

Meanwhile in Victoria, picket lines of the city's striking outside workers will be continued over the weekend.

CUPE Local 50 president Jim Walker said today that if the strike continues, weekends may be used for mass demonstrations of the 280 outside workers, but no such demonstrations are planned this weekend, he said.

Walker said picketing of the oil outlet which serves city hall, the senior citizens' centre, the police building and courthouse and McPherson Theatre, will be kept up over the weekend.

Senior citizens will have to bundle up next week if they want to drop in at the activity centre in Centennial Square, Silver Threads executive director Pauline Barker said Friday.

Mrs. Barker said while the strike by city outside workers continues to deprive the building of heating it will be warmed only by a few electric heaters, and all organized activities cancelled.

However, the centre will be open weekdays from 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. for any members wishing to "drop in for a chat or a game of cards," and lunches will be served as usual. The building will be closed at weekends.

Mrs. Barker said 82 lunches were served and about 50 members were present during the day Friday. Although the main heating supply had been turned off the previous night the building retained some warmth.

"But it's rapidly cooling down," she added.

PROTEST DELAYED

Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen had to give up his plan to set up a one-man picket of the Legislative Buildings Friday to get more provincial money for municipalities.

Pollen was felled by the flu and rested at home while reporters waited for him in the wind.

The mayor's secretary said Pollen was "sorry for the inconvenience" and has set a new date, Feb. 18, for his protest.

Pollen announced his picketing plan earlier this week, shortly after Victoria's 280 outside workers went on strike.

The mayor said earlier one side of his picket sign would point out how provincial government salary increases created problems for municipalities and the other side would ask the province to share revenue with municipalities.

Regina Heroin Cut

REGINA (CP) — RCMP say the supply of heroin to this city's rapidly-increasing circle of addicts has been cut off, at least temporarily, by the seizure Friday of several thousand dollars worth of heroin. Five persons were arrested.

Arsenic Limits Acceptable

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — Current average levels of arsenic in the air of this northern capital are far below acceptable limits in British Columbia, Environment Canada has reported.

Preliminary results of seven months of study were released this week showing that arsenic emitted from a local gold mining operation is giving Yellowknife average daily readings lower than some metropolitan U.S. centres. Almost all the readings were below the B.C. standard of 1.0 milligrams per cubic metre of air.

There are no federal regulations concerning safe levels of arsenic in the air.

The Environment Canada study was released less than a month after a controversy erupted over report conducted by the federal health department in the early 1960s. That report said arsenic may have contributed to acute respiratory disease and skin sores among local residents.

Japanese Await Big Quake

Such a jolt could make vases and bookshelves fall, cause cracks in walls and other such damage, but all except very old or defective buildings should stand. On the basis of historical precedent — including previous Kawasaki city earthquakes in 1649, 1704 and 1812, Takahashi said the largest quake which could be expected would be 6.6 on the Japanese scale.

A 6.6 shock would be less than that of the "great Kanto earthquake" of 1923, in which 140,000 people were killed by fire and debris in Tokyo and Yokohama, and less than the jolt of several postwar quakes in which tens and, in one case, about 3,000 people were killed. Nevertheless, some experts consider any major shock in the Kawasaki area to be hazardous because of the concentration of industrial tanks and pipelines. A construction ministry interim report issued 18 months ago but not mentioned Friday night — forecast the possibility of poisonous gases and serious explosions arising from the petrochemical complex.

The fire chief expressed confidence that the oil refineries and pipelines would be able to stand the pressure of a quake, though this assurance did not quiet questions about the hazards of the industrial complex.

Citizens were told the water mains will probably withstand a jolt and that enough rice is being made available to feed Kawasaki's million residents for at least three days. Self-protection pamphlets were distributed to each family before the recent earthquake prediction, and families were asked to study the documents.

Most of the people who attended the meeting left quickly to return to their homes as soon as the session was over. Few had any comment about their feelings. "If it happens, it happens," said an elderly housewife with a shrug. Such fatalism — which is often known in this part of the world as "the typhoon mentality" — seemed widespread among the citizens of Kawasaki Friday night.

the weather

Wintery weather was general over British Columbia last night. Snow fell in the Cariboo and snow showers or snowflurries occurred elsewhere. Strong winds were also reported from many points. Temperatures ranged from the thirties along the coast to 5 to 10 above in the Central Interior. Cold weather is expected again today and tomorrow over the province with readings well below zero in the north and from 10 to 15 above in the south. Coastal regions will be warmer with maximums in the thirties.

Birdwatchers Stalk Saanich Skylarks

STRAY FEATHERS
harold hosford

With less than a hundred miles separating us, you'd think there'd be little to attract Vancouver birdwatchers to Victoria.

Not so! For one thing, there is just enough difference between the birds of southern Vancouver Island, and those found around the Fraser River delta, to draw most mainland birdwatchers onto the Island from time to time, even if only for a few hours.

And let's not forget the attraction the comparative peace and tranquility of our fair isle must be to anyone subjected to a daily menu of mainland madness.

Whatever their individual reasons were for making the trip, a covey of Vancouver birders found themselves at Swartz Bay last Saturday morning facing a day of birding in Victoria and on the Saanich Peninsula.

Under the benevolent eye of Jack Williams of Sidney, and with half-a-dozen Victorians footing the gas bill, the Vancouverites were treated to the offerings of such well-known Island bird spas as Beaver Lake, Beacon Hill, Clover and Cattle Points, Martindale flats and Island View Beach.

While Hooded Mergansers at Beaver Lake, a European Wigeon at Clover Point and a Golden Eagle at Martindale would have been enough to "make" most birdwatcher's day on the Island, the Vancouverites had their minds on other birds, the kind you must — or usually must — come to Vancouver to see.

One of these is that big, raucous, red-billed roustabout of our rocky headlands, the Black Oystercatcher. A regular here, both in summer and winter, oystercatchers are rare along the rockless shores of the Delta country. They seem to prefer the sometimes precarious pace of life on wave-washed rocks where they acrobatically go about their business of lifting limpets and mooching mussels.

It fell to those little islands at the east end of Shoal Bay to produce the day's quota of oystercatchers — 7 of them — sitting, unnaturally quiet, and almost invisible, against the dark, moist background of the rock.

After a suitable period of study and contemplation, the oystercatchers and the birdwatchers parted — the oystercatchers in the direction of Trial Island, the birdwatchers for Central Saanich and a rendezvous with a legend — Saanich Peninsula's Skylarks.

No longer sole claimants to the name of North America's Skylark Capital, we now must share this honour with Duncan and San Juan Island, Victoria and the Saanich Peninsula can still lay claim to being the centre of abundance hereabouts of these European immigrants. And Central Saanich is core of their range on the Peninsula.

So, it was off to Island View Road where Jack Williams, true to his word, had laid on 9 Skylarks. Mind you they were a little shy at first and it took a little looking to find them but Jack knew his Skylarks.

Stopping beside a close-cropped stubble field, Jack struck out on foot across the muddy flats. In no time there were the Skylarks, formerly hidden as they gleaned among the stubble, frolicking about over his head uttering their rough, trilling alarm notes.

Having put in an appearance, and kept their end of the bargain with Jack Williams, they struck off towards Mallard Drive where there were fewer birdwatchers cluttering up the landscape and the feed was just as good.

It was a near thing. A month from now the air over the Martindale flats will be filled with the songs of Skylarks. But on that bleak January day you had to know where they were or the Vancouverites might have gone home feeling slightly cheated.

NO SHOWDOWN FOR SYNCRUDE

OTTAWA (CP) — A decision on the future of the financially-troubled Syncrude oil sands project has been put off until at least Monday, Energy Minister Donald Macdonald said Friday.

Emerging from a three-hour meeting with top executives of the consortium, Macdonald said further talks will be held in Winnipeg Monday.

That meeting also will be attended by the Alberta government and Shell Canada Ltd., a company interested in the project.

The announcement from Macdonald came only six hours before the midnight deadline set by the consortium to cancel the project unless they obtained additional financing of $1 billion.

"While no final conclusions were reached at the meeting, participants were sufficiently encouraged by progress to agree to a further meeting," Macdonald said in a one-paragraph statement following the talks.

Jack Armstrong, chairman of Imperial Oil Ltd. and the chief spokesman for the consortium, was tight-lipped as he left the meeting.

He read the brief statement issued a few minutes before by the minister, but when questioned would say only "do you want me to read the statement again."

Two Visitors Questioned

Victoria immigration officials said Friday two more visitors from India were stopped at Victoria International Airport in the past 10 days and questioned for being participants in an immigrant-smuggling scheme.

Officials believe the two, who arrived at separate times, may have been victims of an organization exposed Jan. 22 which had attempted to bring Punjabi visitors into Canada to work.

The plan involved a pay-back system which in effect indentured the illegal immigrants to agents in Canada and India. One official called it a "form of slave trade".

In a month-long investigation immigration officials at the airport discovered 25 young men and women had been brought to Canada under the false impression they could remain here and find work.

Twelve visitors were subsequently deported; the remainder were allowed to remain in Canada for three months.

A spokesman for the department said of the two recent arrivals one has been permitted to stay in Canada under a visitor's permit which expires in three months. The other is still awaiting a ruling by an immigration inquiry board.

Big Debt For NDP —Socred

VANCOUVER (CP) — The NDP administration is in deep financial trouble with overruns in almost all departments, the chairman of the legislature's public accounts committee said Friday.

Social Credit MLA Alex Fraser said in an interview that Premier Dave Barrett's refusal to let the all-party committee look at financial statements for 1974 "shows still further that Barrett is trying to cover up a real financial mess."

Fraser accused the premier of not telling the whole story when he promised Thursday to let the opposition see the interim nine-month accounts for 1974 after the legislature opens Feb. 18.

"The truth is that we will only see what he wants us to see," Fraser said. "He knows full well that the opposition will not have the power for another year to look at the vouchers for that period."

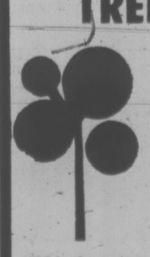
TREE CARE CORNER
FRUIT TREES



Both the fruit and flowering varieties are an asset to any garden if they are properly cared for. Ideally they should be pruned annually from the time they are first planted. This is a relatively inexpensive operation (about $8.00 for an average tree) but you should be sure the person carrying out this work is qualified to do so. If in doubt, get advice BEFORE allowing the work to be done.

We've been giving free estimates and advice on feeding, pruning, pest control and other problems related to fruit trees for the past 12 years. If we may be of service please call us.

Surplus or Deficit?

"Don't be surprised if we have a surplus," said Premier Dave Barrett this week, following a whole bundle of interesting news about the state of the provincial government budget.

Item one was a memo from treasury board — the committee of cabinet ministers headed by the premier which oversees the budget — which imposed an austerity program on spending.

Item two was opposition leader Bill Bennett's reaction. He said the spending freeze ordered by the memo was evidence that the government has been financially incompetent" in handling the province's affairs since taking office in 1972.

At this stage it's hard to judge. Final figures won't be available for months until the audited public accounts of the government come out. They will show actual revenue and actual expenditure, as opposed to the polite fictions contained in the premier's annual budget speech delivered in the legislature sometime in February.

Traditionally, in recent years the B.C. government has always shown a surplus. But that's only because of the ultra-conservative methods of budgeting former premier W. A. C. Bennett utilized and which the present premier and finance minister inherited and basically followed.

It consists of underestimating expenditures and grossly underestimating revenue, so at the end of each fiscal year on March 31, the province always has a budgetary surplus. It always worked for Bennett, but the surplus was piled up by cramping funds for schools and hospitals. He kept a tight rein over the civil service.

Barrett has gone along the same path in his own budgets, sharply underestimating revenue, and it's worked until now. For example, when he gave his budget speech in 1973, the premier estimated spending for the 1972-73 fiscal year about to end (in which Social Credit was in power five months) would total $1,452,000,000. Yet when all accounts were in, actual spending was $1,621,000,000.

Same thing happened a year later. In his 1974 budget speech, the premier said spending would be $1,718,000,000 for the 1973-74 fiscal year. But actual expenditures totalled $2,095,000,000.

As with expenditures, so with income. Estimated 1972-73 revenue was $1,453,000,000. Actual revenue turned out to be $1,667,000,000. Instant surplus of $45 million. Next year, estimated 1973-74 revenue was put at $1,722,000,000 but it was really $2,108,000,000. Another surplus of $12 million over real expenditure.

As this cursory examination shows, the B.C. budget brought down in the spring session of the legislature is only a fuzzy facsimile of the facts.

It works wonderfully with an expanding economy. Even better in times of inflation when the finance minister can produce, like a rabbit out of a hat, a truly huge surplus.

But in a year like the one B.C. has just experienced, with the forest industry collapsing mid-way and the bottom dropping out of copper prices, while provincial government spending (human resources department's $103.5 million overrun, ICBC predicted deficit) seems to have headed for the skies, the system doesn't work so well.

As the premier said, B.C. may end up with a surplus — he's the only one with the up-to-date figures — but it will probably be a very thin margin. Considering all the available evidence, his reassurances have a hollow ring to them.

Petty Tactics and Rhetoric

The striking Canadian Union of Public Employees refusal to allow oil deliveries to the municipal complex adjoining Centennial Square is a prime example of how mindless and intransigent a labor-management dispute can become in a few short days. The Silver Threads centre, Centennial Square stores, city hall, the police station, provincial court and prosecutors' office were all without heat late Friday because of union stubborness. As to the union offer of allowing fuel deliveries if the government complex voluntarily kept the heat off, it is like a black humor sketch out of a surreal novel. What is the object of the strike anyway: to get better wages and working conditions or make pensioners, police, prisoners and prosecutors uncomfortable? In keeping city hall cold the union demeans itself, and the strike takes on a mean personal cast — an ugly facet that can only add to bitterness when the dispute is settled. Issues not personalities are at stake here.

At the same time the city fathers, like a bunch of boys in short pants, dance with glee and shout about how much money the city will save in a long strike. That will certainly endear the mayor and aldermen to CUPE members' families, not to mention the general citizenry as the mountain of garbage forms at the Esquimalt Road heliport.

For the good of this community both sides should bury petty tactics and rhetoric and get back to the negotiating table before the impasse becomes as cold as the Silver Threads centre must be tonight.

EDITOR'S NOTEBOOK

Grounding the Birdmen And Rattling the Bones

Interviews between politicians and reporters always involve a subtle clash of wills. The reporter tries to steer questions in such a way that the politician will reveal something of himself; the politician tries to reveal only what will reflect good on himself. And so it went when I interviewed Premier Barrett last week.

He praised Scott Wallace and emphasized his own respect for traditions — things that might go down well with Victoria's shopocracy and pensioners. For my part I tried to concentrate on the man rather than the premier. After reading Barrett interviews in everything from Ramparts to Barron's, and considering the impending session, I knew he wasn't about to hand me any scoops.

But what isn't said is almost as important as that which is emphasized. Prior to the major spring session there are usually announcements or leaks concerning legislation to be brought before the house. This time 'round only a consolidated expropriation act has been mentioned—a piece of long overdue "motherhood" legislation that no party could object to considering the chaos in B.C.'s laws in this field.

"I'll give you the classic pre-session statement ... it will be very interesting," Barrett said.

When pressed he hesitated, then replied: "There's always plans for a lot of legislation but we've told the ministers to cut some of it back down."

Cut it down? This government which has passed some 200 acts in a little more than two years is going to pare its reforming zeal? A canny man, this premier of ours. Or is the government going to keep its powder dry for a bigger fight?

If the government is playing its legislative cards close to the chest, its leader is very accessible. In less than a fortnight he has given interviews to the Victoria Times, the Toronto Star and Globe and Mail.

A recent NDP caucus meeting discussed pre-election strategy. Two cabinet ministers have either cancelled a planned trip or refused an invitation in the month of May.

None of these details mean a great deal in themselves, but the government knows it faces a bitter battle at the polls and there is concern about a huge Social Credit war chest, real or imagined.

"Where is the money coming for Social Credit? Where are those huge sums of money coming from? Is the old network still functioning in terms of fund raising?" Barrett wondered out loud last week.

"Because of jingoism, because of a lack of reason, and an intelligent exchange in politics they're (Social Credit) still going to ... as Tommy Douglas once described them, gather money from the rich and votes from the poor with the offer to protect them from each other," the premier added.

Disdain for the opposition from any government leader is natural, but questioning concern about where the Socred money is coming from, and an implication that they will gather votes, if only because of lack of reason, is something new, at least for Barrett.

It is not in the government's interest to see a well-oiled, organized Socred machine rolling about the province plastering the walls with new image Jonathan Livingston Seagull Social Credit posters. Once the bird is soaring, clipping its wings becomes difficult.

Whether an election is to be held this summer or fall or 18 months hence remains to be seen. But the coming session could be a barometer of government intentions. If the legislation is prosaic and the politics predatory it might indicate the government is girding for an early election. Both NDP and Socred skeletons could be dangled before the house in the worst traditions of parliament, and the usual traditions of B.C. politics.

The rattle of bones at the house on the Inner Harbor is nothing new. But the flesh and sinew needed for an election issue is something else again.

As Premier Barrett says, it will be a very interesting session. — G. R. O.

Canada an Unknown Country

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. — As a classroom test it was a breeze. Name your favorite Canadian Authors, the 80 Edmonton high school students were asked. The teacher collected the papers, and added up the results. The winners? The most popular Canadian writers, in Edmonton at any rate, are Robert Frost and Ernest Hemingway.

Hemingway, as a preparation for A Farewell To Arms, did at least work for the Toronto Star for a couple of years back in the 1920s. The Committee for an Independent Canada also tested its survey in suburban Vancouver.

Its findings there — one in five students could not name Ottawa as the national capital, fewer than three per cent could identify a single Canadian playwright, one-third could not name any three Canadian authors.

Canada is as much an unknown country to its teachers as to its children. In March, the commission on Canadian studies — a blue-ribbon body, dispassionate and scholarly, unlike the CIC which has a nationalist cause to plead — will publish its first report. The commission's findings will send many of our teachers back to school to rediscover their own country.

Glaring Gaps

● Libraries of Canadian universities and colleges, the commission has found, contain more documents and reports put out by the government of the University States than by the government of Canada. Of 7,000 Canadian titles of all types published in 1973, no university bothered to buy more than 3,000 titles for its own library.

● Canadian studies in universities and colleges are filled with "glaring gaps" to quote one commission staffer. Among the disciplines with the weakest links to the country in which they are taught — sociology, anthropology and political science.

Those two sets of facts, embarassing and sad, are the reality of the state of Canadian literature today. Its unreality was the two-day conference, the first of its kind, held here last weekend on the state of publishing in English Canada.

"Our goal," said Paul Audley, vice-president of the Independent Publishers' Association, at the start of the conference, "must be to bring Canadian books from the fringe to the centre of our society." At the end of the affair, Canadian books remained at the margin, in fact, further from the centre than before because an opportunity had been lost.

The publishers themselves were at least as much to blame as Secretary of State Hugh Faulkner whose speech to the meeting was damned by comments that ranged from "total disappointment" to "nothing but band-aids."

For months Faulkner has been criticized — by myself probably most harshly among newspaper columnists — for his failure to develop policies for any of his cultural responsibilities from films to publishing. Then on the eve of the Peterborough conference, Faulkner announced the withdrawal of the tax concessions to Time and Readers Digest magazines.

BOOKS
. . . victory only in schools

Faulkner's statement, late though it may be, represents a major accomplishment. To achieve it he had to overcome the powerful opposition of cabinet colleagues like Bud Drury and Mitchell Sharp. By his comments since, Faulkner has made it plain he will not allow Time to slip a dressed-up Canadian edition through the fine print of the new law. Canadians at last will be able to talk to each other through their own news magazine.

There was a gracelessness to the attacks made upon Faulkner the evening after his victory. Canadian book publishers are not, in fact, perishing. More Canadian books are being written, printed, sold and read than ever before. The problem instead is that the industry has yet to find its place in Canadian society.

The publishing industry has made many of its own problems. Divided among themselves, Canadian publishers have yet to present coherent policy proposals to governments, provincial as well as federal, or to agree on a single co-operative program, such as in distribution and promotion that would cut the individual costs and bring more Canadian books to the market.

The publishers also are timid. As the world's largest importer of books, Canada has high cards to play. Only one publisher, Mel Hurtig of Edmonton, proposed a solution, a "manufacturer's clause" that would require the printing in Canada of any book of which more than 10,000 copies are imported and sold.

Left without a clear challenge, Faulkner's speech in fact was a disappointment. After three years of effort his department has produced, not a publishing policy but a dribble of unco-ordinated programs that range from the prohibition of further take-overs of Canadian publishing houses to an extra $1.5 million, for a total of $5.5 million in the Canada Council's aid to publishing.

Won in Class

The extra $1.5 million is trivial. Ottawa is spending the same amount of money (though no announcement has yet been made) to publish a single book — a photographic record of Canada-U.S. border scenes to be presented to U.S. President Gerald Ford as Canada's gift to the 1976 U.S. bi-centennial.

Canadian publishing, and therefore Canadian literature, can only enter the society it exists to serve through the schools. Yesterday's texts become today's books, read and enjoyed because they are part of the natural environment rather than bought out of some sense of patriotic duty.

Education is the issue, not the profits or losses, some of these self-inflicted, of individual Canadian pubtishing houses. individual Canadian publishing houses. "We are grappling with the nature of our country," Denis Smith, the new editor of Canadian Forum magazine, told the conference, "in a way that English Canadians have never done before."

That contest can be waged in parliament and in the legislatures, and at conferences of publishers. It can be won either will begin in the classroom, or it only in the schools. Canadian literature will end there.

A Nature Ramble With Skipper

By Freeman King

Let us follow the stream to a place where it has widened out to become a pond and a marsh. Here is another habitat that is perhaps one of the most valuable to man, for here it becomes a reservoir for the rains, so that the water can find its own level and filter out into the surrounding land and so provide moisture for our crops of food.

Here the marsh provides a resting and feeding place for many of our birds that use the flyways to reach their nesting grounds in the far north — the geese and ducks and many other of our feathered friends who have come this way for hundreds of years. They know where the marshes are and stop to rest and feed a while so that they may reach their age-old nesting sites, and then again in the fall when they return to their winter grounds to the south. They provide stopping places for the young birds on their first great flight.

One of the thrills of nature is to listen some evening in the spring or fall and hear the call of the "honkers" as they circle overhead, giving the signal to stop and feed a while. Then at dawn they will take off again on their journey.

Perhaps one pair may decide to stop and nest in this place. Then we can get an extra thrill as the old birds take their brood for a swim around the pond.

In the centre of this marsh there will generally be a pond of deep water where the trout live and as we look close in we find that a wonderful group of plants have taken root, such as the cattails with their poker tops that make a wonderful place for the redwing blackbirds to perch and sing their song.

Then come the sedges and the bullrushes all making a pleasing pattern and each in its own way providing food for other living things. Here, too, we may find a place wrere the muskrat has built its home, living off the green vegetation that the marsh has provided. Here we find the duckweed that is one of the smallest flowering plants in the world and does not have roots that reach to the soil. As we come nearer to the shore we find many other interesting plants which can live only in this type of habitat. Here we can find the frogs that give us a thrill in the early spring with their mating call.

And a bit closer to shore we find the little salamander which goes about its business of helping to return what it has eaten back into the soil again for other things in the great food chain of life.

Wandering around the shoreline we might find a mink or weasel in search of a small duckling or an egg or two. Yet they too fit into life.

Let us look into the water. Here we find greater life than that on the ground for here are many things that are microscopic yet are a part of the whole and some that we can see and marvel at another way of life. Such as the caddis fly larva that builds its own home, the little furry shrimp, always swimming on its back, the diving beetle that takes its own air supply down with it, and the water tiger which is the larva of the beautiful dragon fly.

So our little stream has provided a home and a place for very many living things but eventually our stream will find its way down to the sea carrying out its alloted task of wearing away the land and building it up again when it reaches the delta.

Monstrous Taxation

There is something screwy in the arithmetic of your editorial on the Syncrude project. You talk of the tar sands supplying Canada, plus export needs. This would amount to 2.5 million barrels a day production at present levels. The Syncrude project is to provide 125,000 barrels a day at a capital cost of $2 billion. Twenty such projects would be needed, or $40 billion at present costs, but since the plants would be built over a series of years, and with inflation being what it is, the final cost would be how many billions?

The tar sands cover about 1,500 square miles or say one million acres. Present techniques restrict recovery to open pit mining, covering only a small fraction of the total potential. The terrain is such that the greater part of the area would be irrevocably ruined. While Canada has plenty of land, say about 2.4 billion acres, still the ruination of a million acres seems a bit much.

Nothing is said about the inducement to recover the oil. Perhaps Canada has been so well-served in the past by private enterprise, especially by the oil and gas industry, that you feel that this service will continue to be offered to the people of Canada. That seems far from likely under present government policies. In September, 1973 oil was $3.80 a barrel, of which the federal and provincial government took $1.26, leaving the oil companies $2.54. Today, oil is $6.50 a barrel, of which governments are taking $3.81, leaving producers $2.69, which of course, with inflation as it is, is less than they were getting two years ago. If anyone thinks they are going to get oil or gas, or any other produce, under such monstrous taxation schemes, they had better think again, and quickly. — J. P. Thornton, 943 Wilmer Street.

Bridge Traffic

There is one apparent benefit of the outside workers' strike. Regular users of the Johnson Bridge have long suspected that water traffic can be regulated. The bridge is now open only twice a day, although the open periods are long, motorists can plan their course, as must water traffic.

We are accustomed to catching planes or ferries at specific times. Water traffic requiring the bridge to be raised should be prepared to pass under a specified times, and could do so with a little planning.

I suggest that future water traffic have the right of way, but only at times as determined by the traffic engineer.— A. D. Stafford, 824 Walker Street.

An Insurance Tower Does Not a Gateway Make

By ALLAN FOTHERINGHAM
The Sun

Being an open reply to an invitation:

"We hope that the enclosed invitation will persuade you to join us on Friday afternoon at 2 p.m. for the brief Sod Turning Ceremonies marking the commencement of construction on CROWN LIFE PLACE, the new Western Gateway to Vancouver — 1500 block W. Georgia Street."

Unfortunately, Crown Life, I was unable to be persuaded. Try as I might, I could not will myself to picture the building of yet another tower to house yet another Toronto-based insurance company as the turning point in civilization that your press release indicates.

"Mr. Robert C. Dowsett, President and Director of Crown Life Insurance Co., will officiate at the ceremonies (please see attached biography). Also participating will be Mr. Charles F. W. Burns — Chairman, Mr. William N. Bowden — Sr. Vice-President, Mr. George N. Watson — Sr. Vice-President, and Mr. Frederick E. Whitehead — Investment Vice-President. Representing the British Columbia operations of Crown Life will be . . ."

Nothing against you, Mr. Robert C. Dowsett, who has favored us with a plane ride all the way from Toronto for this honor you bestow on us. It is not just that you have destroyed, as you know, an award-winning building on the site at Georgia and Cardero, to enable your new Parthenon to be built. It is not just that you will be erecting yet another bland box of glass and steel. It is not even that your main concern for locating in this spot is the prestige address of West Georgia.

More than that, it is your "Western Gateway" that irks. An insurance tower as Gateway to a city of sea and mountains? Is that what you really feel, Crown Life, as the symbol of a city that nature has endowed so extravagantly — an insurance office?

"We realize that ceremonial functions such as this tend to have a sameness and, quite frankly, often produce little of newsworthy note. We hasten to point out that in this case we are marking the commencement of construction on not just another high-rise office tower, but rather on a new Place at the Western entrance to our city. A 23-storey office tower — yes — but, situated on a full city block which will retain 80 per cent of its total area as open space!"

Twenty-three storeys of men in pastel shirts putting their signatures to papers that will then be stuffed in envelopes and mailed to other office towers in the city, most of them insurance towers. "What do you do for a living, Daddy?" "I sit in a glass tower and mail pieces of paper to other men in other glass towers."

"Oh," says the child.

"The unusual design and shape of the tower, the total concept of the development and for its land use, plus the proposed footbridge crossing of Georgia and Pender streets, will make CROWN LIFE PLACE a major Vancouver landmark."

I know, as you know, Crown Life that you successfully defeated an attempt by the Heritage Advisory Board to save the Marwell Building by having it incorporated into the design of the tower. The Marwell Building in 1950 was the first building to win a Massey Gold Medal for excellence of design in a national architecture contest. It was featured in Canadian Art and in Time.

Both the architects, Harold Semmens and Doug Simpson, are now dead, but, as Barry Simpson has written of his father's building, it was the first Vancouver building to successfully meld the international style with our regional theme — as opposed to the plethora of Miami, New York and Los Angeles styles all around us. You, Crown Life, of course demolished that building. It was less than 25 years old.

"We will have available for you at the ceremony, kits containing fact sheets and a transcript of the President's remarks, prints of the architectural rendering, (and color slides for TV use), as well as a general information release and photographs of the scale model of the project . . ."

Is this, really, what life is intended for? Or Vancouver intended for? No doubt, Crown Life, you are proud of your leadership in extending toward Stanley Park the picket line of towers that will block the harbor from view. Just as they have done in San Francisco. And has been done in the skilful arrangement of the Baxter complex on West Hastings. And as the CPR is attempting to do at the foot of Granville and Howe. Be proud of your breakthrough.

"As an added incentive for you to consider picture possibilities, attractive hostesses will also be in attendance . . ."

A little bit of cheesecake makes the insurance go down. Why not? as we say, in the two official languages. Life insurance, as we know, is the basis of North American society, its very raison d'etre. There are 67 life insurance companies listed in my phone book. It would not be fair, really, to attend one sod-turning for a new insurance office tower and not to attend all, several dozen of which will undoubtly be turning sod before the end of the year. Attractive hostesses have to have work, after all.

"Hot coffee before, and 'other refreshments' following the ceremony, will be provided."

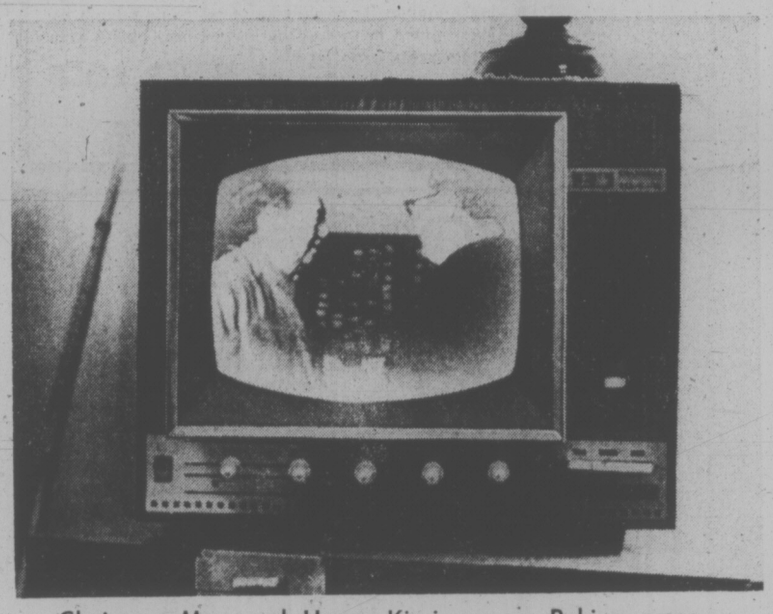
You are known by the euphemisms you keep. By all means, other refreshments are in keeping with the occasion. It is not every day that a Western Gateway to the Pacific is born. When the next insurance company builds farther west on West Georgia, will that be known as the western gateway to the Western Gateway to the Gateway to the Pacific? One must keep one's superlatives straight.

"Hoping to see you Friday, January 24th at 2 p.m. . . ."

Thanks anyway, Crown Life. No hard feelings. We can't interfere with progress, can we?

TV in China: One-Eyed Man Among Blind

By JOHN BURNS



Chairman Mao and Henry Kissinger on Peking screen

PEKING — Enslaved by television? Then how about a rest cure in China, where the idiot box offers less than three hours of programming a night, in black and white only, and never, never slips into the mindlessness of fun and entertainment for their own sake?

Consider: Half an hour of news, mostly voice-over stuff of Chinese leaders greeting foreign dignitaries, perhaps another 30 minutes of carefully-scripted political "debate" among young zealots vying with one another in their enthusiasm for the party, then a revolutionary opera, ballet or film, often one that has been shown dozens of times before.

Not, you might think, the kind of fare to rivet the viewing audience to their seats, and yet — well, there's the old saying about the one-eyed man in the kingdom of the blind, and there aren't many other recreational distractions competing for the viewer's time.

A Tiny Minority

In point of fact, there are less than 200,000 sets in the whole country, one for every 4,000 people, so the quality of programming is something that concerns only a tiny minority, and it is not exactly their fashion to go calling the local station demanding less Mao thought and more soap operas.

Still, the viewers one sees — room-boys in hotels, principally, for that is about the only place a foreigner is allowed where a television set is to be found — seem to find something worth watching. They sit there, white jackets in the dark, taking in everything on the screen, and only very, very occasionally snoozing.

It is odd, really, in a country where propaganda has been developed to a degree that runs beyond Karl Marx's fondest dreams, to find the most effective of all the instruments of thought control so under-utilized. It's more than 16 years since regular programming began, yet it's still back, in terms of techniques and viewing audience, where television in North America was in the early 1950s.

The relative backwardness of it all certainly owes nothing to a lack of understanding of television's potential, for as early as 1960 one of the top men in the broadcasting adminstration went on the record as saying that "in the field of propaganda, television has far greater advantages than other media".

What, then, is the problem? Twofold, probably — the state's insistence on "self-reliance" in industry, meaning that the sets and much of the studio equipment must be manufactured in China; and related to this the high costs, reflected in the $250 price tag of a made-in-Shanghai, black-and-white, 12-inch-screen receiver.

Visitors to the Peking station in recent times have been told that the party attaches the highest importance to the development of the medium. But irony of ironies, what this seems to mean, in terms of current priorities, is that all efforts are being bent to the development of color transmissions.

What need of color, when even the senior broadcasting officials concede that there are "vast areas" of the country beyond the reach of black-and-white transmissions, and access to a set, even in the urban areas of the country, is still about as rare, say, as central heating?

Well, it seems the answer comes down to prestige: "It has become quite common in the world to have color television, so we are doing our best to catch up." This best, to date, consists of two years of intermittent experiments with color transmissions in Peking, using a mixture of home-made and imported equipment, with results that have so far deterred the announcement of a start-up date for regular programming.

Another gauge of the importance of television to the party — broadcasting in general, actually — is that it comes under the direct control of the Central Committee, receiving the special attentions of none other than Madame Mao, Chiang Ching, who has become, since the Cultural Revolution, a sort of grand arbiter of all things cultural.

The party line on television, emphasizing its propaganda value, was in abeyance during the Cultural Revolution, when planned expansion of the network was curtailed and the stations already in operation suspended service, it being judged that the medium was "not necessary" for a time.

Operations resumed in 1968, and the 27 stations that had been in operation around the country in 1960 were soon joined by another 20, serving between them all 29 provinces, autonomous regions and cities except Tibet, the latter apparently being too remote and mountainous to be accessible to the microwave and cable relays from Peking that feed most of the programming to the provincial stations.

'Court Circular'

A typical evening these days begins with a 60-minute test pattern, the last 15 minutes enlivened by revolutionary music. Precisely at 7 p.m. the station signs on for the night with a chorus of Sailing the Seas Depends on the Helmsman, Making Revolution Depends on Mao Tse-tung Thought, followed by an off-screen announcer ("Comrades, . . .") reading the evening's program.

China being what it is, the bulk of the news on any given evening will be the television equivalent of the court circular that still appears on the social pages of some British newspapers — reports of ceremonial meetings between Chinese leaders and visiting dignitaries. It makes for wooden television, what with all the shots of handshaking, long sequences of host and guests sitting side-by-side in armchairs, then more handshaking, but it is all that many Chinese ever see of the men at the pinnacle of power.

Top priority, of course, goes to any meeting involving Chairman Mao. These occur infrequently, but the routine is always the same. As the announcer reads the official announcement that has already appeared in the day's edition of The People's Daily ("Chairman Mao Tse-tung yesterday met and had a friendly conversation with . . ."), the station runs a two-minute, soundless film of the encounter.

For Mao, the film will usually be run two or three times a night, two or three nights running. No other differentation is made; whether the occasion is the visit of President Nixon or of some pop-Bah from the South Yemen it's all the same to the scriptwriters, editors and announcers, who will report it all in the sort of deadpan tones that Walter Cronkite reserves for the Wall Street averages.

Apart from such ceremonial activities on the part of the country's leaders, the news will usually feature two or three filmed reports on the progress being made in industry, agriculture, education, sports, indeed almost any area of life around which the tentacles of the party have curled, which is to say just about everything.

It might be a report on rice-planters in the south praising the party for a new rice-transplanting machine that saves them hours of back-breaking labor, or a piece about the happy lives of university graduates from Shanghai who have been resettled at the party's direction on the Mongolian grasslands, or something about the heightened ideological consciousness of soldiers in a Nanking unit of the People's Liberation Army.

Every few nights there will be a 15-minute slot for international news, devoted largely to the activities of Chinese delegations visiting overseas. This might be the latest denunciation of the Russians by the Chinese representative at the United Nations, or a sequence on the Chinese team's performance in a table-tennis tournament in Sweden, or the visit of a high party figure to the celebrations marking the anniversary of the Albanian revolution.

The Chinese have film exchange agreements with a number of foreign broadcasting organizations, and the fruits of these sometimes appear on the international news — but only when the event in question serves to illustrate a point of party policy. Thus there were several reports on the American Indians' occupation of Wounded Knee two summers ago, always with a CBS-TV logo in the corner of the screen, and the announcer reading a script excoriating the U.S. government for oppressing its minority peoples.

The news is sometimes followed by the Chinese equivalent of public service broadcasts. This could take the form of a debate on the current ideological drive, with all the speakers accenting its correctness; or, perhaps more useful to the average viewer, a discussion between a doctor and a housewife on the importance of diet, hygiene and exercise in the rearing of healthy children.

The main feature of the evening's show is sometimes presented live — a performance by the visiting Rumanian army chorus, for instance, or a demonstration by one of the troupes of jugglers, magicians and acrobats for which China is justly famed — but it is more often filmed. This is the spot reserved for revolutionary operas, ballets and films, the stock of which is limited, so many of them appear over and over again.

Play for Friendship

It used to be that the only sports shown were filmed, with the commentators never, never mentioning the score, it being party doctrine that games are played for friendship and not to win. This has all changed in the past couple of years, however, and live broadcasts of table-tennis, basketball, volleyball, football and hockey are now common, complete with scores.

A sports commentator must still have his political wits about him, however, as a Canadian television crew discovered when they toured here with the University of British Columbia hockey team last year. During a game one night in the northeastern city of Changchun, the Canadians stationed themselves before the broadcast booth to get some footage of the play-by-play man, a regular Foster Hewitt with a rapid-fire patter on the progress of the game.

The man, seemingly unperturbed, continued with his patter until he saw the light on the Canadians' film camera come on, indicating that the film was rolling and the sound mike on. Instantly, without a break in his rhythm or a pause for breath, he launched into an encomium for Norman Bethune, the Canadian doctor whose death in the service of the Chinese Red Army in 1939 was eulogized by Chairman Mao.

It was an example of quick thinking and sensitivity to the party line, qualities that will be at a premium as the medium develops and switches more and more to live broadcasts, away from the rigidities of film. With a potential audience of 800 million, nobody should doubt that television here, like everything else, will slowly catch up with the western world. But Chairman Mao, giving live press conferences in the Hunan Room of the Great Hall of the People? As the Chinese would say, bu yao deng, meaning: Nothing doing.

The Old Fools Need Help

By JOHN NICHOL

I have a wife and three daughters. They are all stronger, louder, meaner, more aggressive, less forgiving, better looking, nicer and more rested than I am. Therefore I concluded long ago that I would never write a column about the women's liberation movement. I knew that the din at home would be unbearable.

However, things have changed. Our federal government has said the magic words. WHY NOT?

I believe that our whole society, going back to the time when the first ape man hit the first ape woman behind the ear with a mastodon bone, has a built in psychological bias which denies the competence of women.

I know what I am talking about. Being a woman is like being a husband or father. For as far back as anyone can remember husbands and fathers have been the subject of constant scorn and laughter in all the media.

Who is the idiot in all the comic strips? That's right — old dad! He is the one with his shirt tail hanging out, with his smelly pipe, his bald head, and his collapsed abdominal muscles. He is the one to whom the laughing children and the tolerant wife explain the facts of life with forgiving smiles. Dagwood Bumstead lives!

In the golden age of radio we had shows like Fibber McGee and Molly. Molly was smart. But Fibber, you may recall, had a cupboard full of trash that fell on his head whenever he went for his coat. The idiot! For fifteen years that trash fell on his head!

On television today we have the hit show — All in The Family. Here we see the popular husband and father image at its clearest. Edith Bunker is not overly bright, but she is tolerant, smiling, warm, and above all else, forgiving. The daughter is beautiful and young — and again — wonderfully tolerant and forgiving. But Archie is stupid, bigoted, loud, fat, bald, and sloppy.

There is another show called Maude. Maude is a tall, domineering woman underneath whose brash veneer there lurks a heart of gold. Her husband, Walter, snivels around in the background. Underneath his veneer there lurks nothing. As somebody once said of somebody else, "Deep down inside he's shallow." He is incompetent. He is the old man.

And in the world of advertising the father-husband is the idiot to whom all things need explaining.

He has a cold but doesn't know how to cure it. He has an aching back but doesn't know where to rub. His garbage bags rip open. His dentures don't fit. He can't figure out his income tax. He has never tasted coffee like this before. Or tea. Or milk. He is a dolt. And a sucker.

And one day each year they have Father's Day. Tradition declares that each father will receive either a pair of carpet slippers or a necktie. These gifts are the eternal symbols of passive old age, and of slow strangulation, respectively.

So I agree that women should be released from the psychological corsets in which they struggle. And I have only one request. Women — if you do open the magic door to freedom and filfillment, don't throw away the key. Pass it to the boys in the back room. Here — have a cigar!

Great-West

Record sales of $3.5 billion of life insurance and annuities in 1974 were reported by Great-West Life, an increase of 26 per cent over the previous year.

J. W. Burns, company president, reported following a board of directors meeting that business in force as of Dec. 31, 1974, totalled $22.7 billion, up 19 per cent over 1973.

Net income before policyholder dividends amounted to $41,978 million. Net income attributable to shareholders totalled $16.072 million or $8.03 a share compared with $13.568 million or $6.78 a share in 1973.

At the same meeting the board also approved the payment of a quarterly dividend of 75 cents a share on the capital stock of the company payable Feb. 28 to shareholders of record at the close of business Feb. 14.

Placer

Placer Development Ltd. has reported consolidated net earnings for the year ended Dec. 31 of $42.5 million or $3.54 per share, including extraordinary items of $3.1 million or 26 cents a share.

In 1973, net earnings were $71.8 million or $5.98 a share, including extraordinary items of $12.7 million or $1.06 a share.

The company's annual report says income declined primarily because of lower earnings by its Gibraltar Mine near Williams Lake, hit by a lengthy strike, poor world market conditions and reduced extraordinary income.

Bethlehem

Bethlehem Steel Corp., the second-largest United States steelmaker, reports its profits increased 65 per cent last year, setting earnings and sales records.

While Bethlehem's increase is a substantial rise, it still is below the figures reported by U.S. Steel Corp., whose earnings rose 92 per cent last year over 1973.

Bethleham disclosed it earned $342 million or $7.85 a share on sales of $5.45 billion in 1974 compared with $206.6 million and $4.72 a share on $4.18 billion sales in 1973, the previous record high.

Even so, Bethlehem complained that the profit return on its investment wasn't that good, although improved. It said the return equalled 6.3 cents on a dollar, up from last year's 4.9 cents, but still below the record 8.5 cents set in 1955.

Bethlehem, like U.S. Steel, raised prices substantially, but cut some of its hikes after President Ford complained they were contributing to the continuing inflation while the U.S. was in an economic slump.

U.S. Steel's profits announcement noted that they topped a 17-year-old earnings record by more than 50 per cent.

The largest steel-maker in the United States reported earlier that it earned $634.9 million, or $11.72 a share, on sales of $9.34 billion for the year. Earnings were up 92 per cent from the $325.8 million, or $6.01 a share, returned in 1973 on sales of $7 billion.

Hudson's Bay

Hudson's Bay Oil and Gas Co. Ltd. reports 1974 net earnings of $58.4 million or $3.07 per common share, compared with $39.4 million or $2.07 per share in 1973.

Funds generated from operations were up 23 per cent to $91.5 million or $4.83 per common share compared with $74.6 million or $3.93 per share for the previous year.

D. C. Jones, company president, said the large gains overstate the real results of the year's operations because they were derived in part from a net reduction in hydrocarbon reserves.

A major part of the profits reported from the liquidation of these assets will be offset by higher replacement costs, he said.

Coseka

Coseka Resources Ltd. reports net income of $139,978 for the three months ended Oct. 31, 1974, compared with $57,034 in the same period of 1973.

The income in the latest quarter included an extraordinary item of $114,616, the gain on the sale of securities by a subsidiary. The income was reduced by a minority interest of $20,751.

In the comparable 1973 quarter extraordinary items accounted for only $206 and minority interest for $450.

The company also reported the discovery of two gas wells from seven projects financed by a German drilling fund.

One is in northeast British Columbia and is awaiting a service rig, while the other, also in B.C. under an Imperial joint venture, is at 7,000 feet and projected for 10,800 feet.

Craigmont

Craigmont Mines Ltd. reports net earnings of eight cents a share in its fiscal first quarter ending Dec. 31, compared with 36 cents a share in the same quarter of 1973.

Ross Duthie, company president, told shareholders at the annual meeting the decrease was due to lower copper prices and higher costs.

He said that, although the annual report said all production was sold through 1975, there might still be a need for some cutbacks. Craigmont sells half its copper concentrate production in Japan and half in the United States.

"This month's discussions with buyers indicate that a reduction of sales may be necessary after May but, until the situation is clarified, no announcement as to cutbacks in production or employment can be made," Duthie said.

Duthie said the company is in a good position, better than many, to ride out the present market. "It has no debt, a good cash position, a good degree of flexibility in production and a highly skilled work force and staff," he added.

YOUR TAXES

By I. H. ASPER

The Carter Royal Commission on Taxation recognized human instincts and the need to preserve incentives for productivity. It recommended that the top personal income tax rate be reduced from approximately 90 per cent, including provincial taxes, to 50 per cent.

The reason was that high income individuals are generally a pretty creative bunch and that their activity contributes mightily to social objectives as well as economic well-being.

The commission was aware that the high tax rates were encouraging the economic doers, risk-takers and entrepreneurs to divert their energy and imaginations from economic pursuits to things like safari picture-taking and other avocations which had no plus effect on Canada.

After all, the commissioners reasoned, why would anyone risk hard earned after-tax capital to start something new only to find that if he is unsuccessful he'll have legal difficulty in writing off his loss, while if he's successful and generates taxable income, say, 80 per cent of that income will be taken away in taxes.

It was also felt that the high personal rates encouraged otherwise productive individuals to divert too much of their time from income generating to income preservation through tax planning.

Unfortunately, the commission's objective hasn't been achieved. Although the top rates have been reduced, federally, the provinces haven't followed suit and we still have top rates in the high 70 per cent range and they cut in at a much lower income level and apply to much more income than before.

Thus high income individuals are still seeking tax relief through tax shelters of one kind or another.

One group in particular is hard hit and can find little relief — the practitioners of a profession. Some professions, like engineers, permit their members to incorporate their operations. This has the effect of applying the small business tax rate of 25 per cent to the first $100,000 of their earnings.

Most professionals aren't as lucky. Doctors, lawyers, accountants, and dentists in particular, are denied, by their professional governing societies, the right to incorporate.

To partially overcome this anachronism in tax treatment, in recent years these professionals have sought refuge through the incorporation of facilities or service companies. That is, they might set up a company which is owned by themselves or their families and which buys all their equipment, furniture and rents them plus office space to the practitioner, making a profit on the operation.

The effect is to reduce the professional income, which is taxed at high rates, and have that income earned by the facilities company, where it is taxed at a low rate.

There are many variations on the theme. The service company can take over all of the non-professional aspects of the practice — the billing of clients, providing staff, collecting receivables, doing the banking, paying the bills and so on, all at a reasonable profit, and with happy tax results.

The benefits are more than tax minimization. Estate planning objectives can be accomplished as well, since the company's growth in value is reflected in the hands of various members of the family and not the professional. The wife can be employed by the company and thus qualify for Canada Pension Plan as well as a company plan. The benefits are real and substantial.

In recent years revenue has, in some cases, attacked this type of tax planning and several cases have gone to court. In most instances, the taxpayer has been successful in defeating the revenue claim that these arrangements are an artificial sham.

However, some such schemes have been upset, where the taxpayers were either too enthusiastic in their attempt to divert personal income to the low-taxed company, or were sloppy in implementing the plan.

Now, revenue appears to have finalized its thinking on the subject and decided to stop fighting these arrangements if they are carried out within the framework of what the Tax Department considers reasonable.

The department has recently issued an Interpretation Bulletin on professional management corporations in which it partially spells out what it feels is reasonable. The department's view still appears somewhat stringent but progress has been made.

Taxpayers in the professions at least can now know that partial incorporation is possible and would be well advised to take advantage of that right.

But their main thrust should be directed toward convincing their professional governing bodies and provincial governments that full incorporation should be allowed. There are several ways in which the public can be protected from the corporate limited liability in cases of malpractice or professional negligence, and this has been done in several other jurisdictions with success.

Until the law is changed, professionals and their advisers will have to seek the advantages of the management or service company device in order to achieve partial relief from the illogical tax discrimination they suffer.

Q. Due to Consumer Price Indexing, by what amount have personal exemptions increased over the amounts deductible in 1973?

A. The basic personal exemption as well as all other personal exemptions, including the limitation or income of debendants, have been increased by 6.6%. The increased amounts are shown on Schedule 6 and page 4 of your 1974 income tax return.

Q. Can a divorced woman claim the equivalent married exemption of $1,492 for a 13-year-old?

A. Yes, provided the child lives with the taxpayer in the self-contained domestic establishment maintained by the taxpayer.

Q. My wife and I are the same age and this year we qualify for the age exemption. On my tax form do I claim $1,066 age exemption for my wife as well as $1,066 for myself?

A. No. The fact that your wife is entitled to claim the age exemption if she files her own tax return does not effect the amount you can claim as married exemption.

Q. My wife and I were married in September. She was working before marriage but has not worked since. Can I claim the full married exemption of $1,492 for her? What does she do about filing a return?

A. If she received no income after your marriage, you may claim the full married exemption of $1,492. Otherwise, calculate your exemption taking into account only the income she received after your marriage. If your wife is taxable or had tax deducted from her salary, she must file her own return.

25-Unit Townhouse For Esquimalt Rd.

Victoria city council gave preliminary approval Thursday to a rezoning application for a 25-nit townhouse scheme on a 37,000-square-foot property at Esquimalt Road and Robert Street.

The developers, E. Ramage Construction Ltd., propose to build 16 two-bedroom units, eight single-bedroom units and one three-bedroom unit, with below-grade parking and access from Robert.

An earlier application for an apartment project on the site was rejected last November because the density was considered too high. The city's Victoria West study calls for redevelopment of the area to multiple-family residential use.

The Advisory Planning Commission's favorable support of the latest proposal, which council endorsed Thursday, is conditional on street widening and other improvements. The rezoning application has to be submitted to a public hearing.

In other business, council approved an APC recommendation that property at 352 Gorge Road East be designated a special development area under the Municipal Act, to clear the way for a 26-unit motel development.

The commission said the owners intend to remove from the property the existing seven-suite apartment. The house, built in 1926, is "poorly maintained," said the report.

The developers are seeking a land-use contract with the city, rather than rezoning approval, because the site area is slightly less than the 20,000-square-foot minimum required for motels under Victoria's transient accommodation zone.

This proposal, too, has to go before a public hearing.

Council also gave final approval to a bylaw rezoning property on Albert Street, between Bay and Denman, for a nine-unit townhouse development.

The application was tabled two weeks ago after residents of single-family homes in the area near Royal Jubilee Hospital complained that the project would compound traffic and parking problems in an already-narrow street.

But zoning committee chairman Ald. Mike Young said council members had since visited the site and satisfied themselves that "this (the townhouse scheme) is a proper use for it."

He said road improvements to Albert Street, to be undertaken by the developer, would ensure reasonable access to the complex.

Airline Corrects Engine

OTTAWA — Air Canada has acted on a recommendation of the U.S. Federal Aviation Administration to modify a defect in the Pratt and Whitney jet engines used in the Boeing 727, 737 and DC-9 aircraft, Transport Minister Jean Marchand told the Commons Friday.

The minister said he recalled discussing this matter with Air Canada President Yves Pratte. He said the president had told him Air Canada had complied with the recommendation and that there had been no accidents.

"I will check again whether they really did," the minister added.

He was replying to questions asked by Dan McKenzie (PC-Winnipeg South Centre). The member asked the minister to check with the other airlines in Canada.

McKenzie said the U.S. Federal Aviation Administration had recommended that airlines be required to modify the defect. He said the defect was reported to cause engine failure as the engines accelerated to take-off thrust.

Earlier in the house McKenzie called on the federal government to act at once to upgrade its surveillance of air freight to control or prevent the shipment of cargo that endangers the life and safety of passengers and airline personnel.

The member said a recent ban on transport of certain types of dangerous cargo on U.S. airlines could have an impact on Canada.

Canadian airline pilots have expressed the fear that as a result of this ban dangerous and radioactive cargo may be rerouted through Canada on Canadian airlines, the member pointed out.

To Push Salmon?

VANCOUVER (CP) — The provincial government is considering setting up an overseas trading corporation to help market B.C. salmon in the face of slumping export sales.

Ron Knight, director of economic analysis for the department of economic development, outlined the plan Friday at the annual convention of the Pacific Trollers Association.

Knight told the trollers that the trading corporation is being considered as part of a program to revitalize export sales and at the same time double the annual harvest of Pacific salmon.

Export sales which account for more than 80 per cent of the annual B.C. salmon catch were down almost 50 per cent for some types of salmon last year.

Among the hardest hit were exports of fresh and frozen salmon — down 41-per-cent and 24-per-cent respectively. They now account for fully one-half the export sales said Knight.

Also slumping were sales of canned, down 11 per cent while all other types of exports were down 49 per cent.

Knight said the problem is a recession in the European market where three-quarters of all salmon exported from B.C. are sold.

Interviewed after the meeting, Knight said the corporation has been under study for some time and if set up would likely be used to market any kind of product for sale by small companies from B.C.

He said that being considered is: a $14 million program to triple sockeye production; a joint federal-provincial program to double the present harvest of Pacific salmon and studies of salmon farming in which six companies and 11 Indian bands have shown interest.

Near Evictions

SURREY (CP) — A Survey bylaw, superseded by the Landlord and Tenant Act, almost got 30 residents evicted. Under the bylaw, tenants could pay their rent by the 27th day of the month, however the provincial act stipulated rent must be paid by the first of the month. Rentalsman Barrie Clark said most landlords who had issued eviction notices because of the confusion have withdrawn the notices.

PASSMORE receives silver tray from Mayor Ed Lum

Saanich Lauds Passmore

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

The man whose dry quick-wit has livened Saanich council meetings was honored Friday night.

More than 400 guests filled the Cedar Hill Community Centre to applaud former alderman Les Passmore as he received the freedom of the municipality.

MLA Hugh Curtis, former mayor of Saanich, was one of those who came to honor a man who has just ended 33½ years of community service — as alderman, reeve for a year, and police commissioner.

Curtis echoed the sentiments of all who had worked with or watched Passmore as he carried out his duties when he said:

"His humor was inexhaustible. He had the ability to bring warmth, laughter and tenderness to otherwise dreary meetings."

But Passmore, the man of keen quips, was lacking in them Friday as accolade upon accolade was given him.

"I really don't have any funnies tonight," he said quietly. "I'm extremely honored. All I can say, very sincerely, is thank you very much."

He recovered enough, however, to give one final crack in the old style.

Seeing former co-worker Bill White among those in the audience, Passmore pointed out White, former alderman Edith Gunning and others were equally deserving of the honor given him.

"I can remember Bill White campaigning for lights years ago," he said. "His slogan was White for Lights. In those days we couldn't fill up the potholes so we had to have lights to see where they were!"

Curtis, Mayor Ed Lum and others recalled how, always his own man, Passmore doggedly did the right thing, even if it cost him votes.

They recalled how Passmore fought for Saanich's first main sewer system, later the first sewer enterprise project and, in later years, low-cost housing.

In addition to an engraved silver tray, commemorating the occasion, Passmore and his wife, Alice, received from Saanich residents an all-expenses-paid trip to Hawaii and His and Hers flight bags.

Lum said Passmore had never taken time out for a holiday in all the years he had worked for Saanich.

"This will be a well-earned vacation," he said.

Representatives of all the other municipalities in Greater Victoria were present, Ald. Alf Hood presenting Passmore with a silver engraved cigarette box from the city of Victoria.

But the greatest gift of all was the genuine admiration shown Passmore as each of the 400 filed by, shaking the hand of the new freeman of Saanich.

Long Strike Over

TOKYO (AP) — All 48 United States pilots contracted to Japan Air Lines (JAL) were back at work this week after a two month strike, a JAL spokesman said Thursday. The pilots sought salaries equivalent to those paid by U.S. airlines and other benefits. It was not known what demands, if any, were met.

HOUSING SHORTAGE?
Anyone who can buy now but has decided to wait until mortgage rates ease, may well be making a serious error. Not only do we face continued inflation, which effects home sale prices, but we run the risk of having to pay an additional premium because of an extensive housing shortage which is expected when money becomes more plentiful.
The result of that will mean another sellers' market, where there is an extreme demand but a limited supply.
Don't be one of those who then say "I wish I had purchased a house in 1975".
The aforementioned is predicted and forecasted by many economists, and the housing shortage has been recognized by them and all levels of government.
Should You Buy A New Home Now?
I With rising construction costs, new home prices will probably never be lower.
II Only new homes qualify for a $5,000 Government 2nd. mortgage at an effective interest rate of 7½% (8% less annual rebate)
III Only a new home qualifies for the $1,000 Government grant.
IV If you own a home now and would like to buy a new home, 2nd. mortgages at 9% are available for a limited time from BLOCK BROS. This helps to make your home more saleable. (Full details available from any Block Bros. manager.)
V With the critical slow down in construction it may be impossible to find a suitable home in 1976.

This Thief Had His Fingers In the Cookie Jar

PHILADELPHI A — A New Jersey man has drawn five years probation for stealing a tractor-trailer containing 25,789 pounds of cookies. Joseph Kazmier, 34, of Bricktown, N.J. pleaded guilty to stealing the rig that was enroute from the Keebler plant here to the firm's facility in Framingham, Mass.

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. — David Redman, a husky U.S. Navy chief petty officer, has been elected president of the local chapter of the National Organization for Women. Redman, sporting a button that said "Uppity Women Unite," said he was delighted and promised to "work hard" in his new role. He is one of three males in the Virginia Beach group and is believed the first man elected president of a NOW chapter.

VARIGOTTI, Italy — Mario Foriani said he has cancelled his attempt to swin 68 miles from Varigotti to Portovenere because his wife burned his swimsuit and slippers, saying, "I don't want to be a widow." "I'll try to convince her that there is no danger," the 41-year-old unemployed printer said Friday.

LONDON — Weight-conscious midwives at Crumpsall Hospital in Manchester have turned thumbs down to the plump cherubs of the Flemish master painter Peter Rubens. The school's senior officer, Kathleen Malin, refused to hang a gift reproduction of Rubens' Christ Child, St. John and Angels. The painting depicts four chubby babies with round faces and full tummies. "We don't want fat, overweight babies anymore," said Miss Malin, unimpressed by the work. "We know these days that babies must not be obese, because it's very bad for their health."

MONTREAL — The Canadian edition of Reader's Digest magazine could lose 64 per cent of its advertising revenue because of proposed tax changes, Paul Zimmerman, president of Reader's Digest Canada Association Ltd., said Friday. Zimmerman based his statement on a survey by a Toronto-based market research firm, Canadian Fact Ltd., which said 19 per cent of the lost revenue would go to other Canadian magazines while newspapers and broadcasting outlets would swallow the rest.

LONDON — Marlen Dietrich, known for her shapely legs, became irate at photographers trying to take her picture as she limped into London. "Go away. You are annoying me," she said to photograpers who surrounded her Friday at London's Heathrow airport.

"You are all morons. Why can't you do a proper job? Go away!" Miss Dietrich refused to comment on her limp. She is in London for a threatre appearance.

PHILADELPHIA — A second former chauffeur says he once was engaged to spinster Rachel Fitler. The news came to light when he sued the 77-year-old millionairess for $10,000 in a negligence case. Hans von Aczel, 38, of Adsmore, Pa., said his own engagement to the wealthy aunt of Happy Rockefeller was called off when he was injured "because she can't stand sick people, she can't even stand anyone complaining of a headache." Last fall, another former chauffeur, Michael Wilson, a 28-year-old Welshman, announced his engagement to Miss Fitler. The marriage has been expected and postponed several times since then.

SHREWSBURY, England — Mr. and Mrs. Alan Weaver auctioned practically all their worldly goods to aid hunger victims in Bangladesh. A color television set costing $504 went for $288, a washing machine fetched $168 and their hi-fi went for $96. Weaver, a 29-year-old salesman earning $72 a week, decided on the auction after seeing a television program on Bangladesh.

WASHINGTON — Sen. Harry Byrd is trying once again to convince Congressional colleagues to restore full citizenship to Robert E. Lee more than 100 years after the Confederate general's death. Byrd said his legislation was bolstered by the discovery of Lee's original letter to president Andrew Johnson requesting restoration of his rights after the Civil War. "As a Virginian, I take this step with much pride and, this year, with much hope that final and favorable action will be taken on what Gen. Lee himself requested," Byrd said.

Taking The Mickey?

NEW YORK (UPI)—Lawyers for Walt Disney productions went to court Friday to force producers of the X-rated movie The Life and Times of the Happy Hooker to remove the Mickey Mouse March from the film.

The Disney lawyers also want three men who perform with a naked woman during the playing of the song to remove their Mickey Mouse ears. The wearing of the ears, court papers said, represents "unfair competition."

Disney productions filed a $2.5 million damage suit alleging the film's producer, Spangler & Sons of New York, violated copyright laws by using the march, written in 1955 for the Mickey Mouse Club.

Judge Thomas Duffy delayed a decision and called another hearing for Wednesday.

From Nixon to God . . .

WASHINGTON (AP) — Charles Colson, former Nixon administration aide who was released Friday from prison for Watergate crimes, says he plans to devote as much time as possible to religious work.

The one-time special counsel to former president Richard Nixon became a free man when Judge Gerhard Gesell ordered his one-to-three-year term for obstruction of justice reduced to the nearly seven months he has served.

"I'm very grateful to the Lord that this could happen and to Judge Gesell for the compassion he has shown," Colson, 43, told reporters outside his secluded home in suburban McLean, Va., hours later.

Colson, who professed a spiritual conversion after his entanglement in the Watergate scandal became known, said his immediate plans were "to take some time to be with our family and friends."

He said he hoped to do some writing later, combining religious subjects and his Watergate experiences. But unlike some other Watergate figures he will not join the lecture circuit, he said.

U.S. Puts 6-Month Limit on Valium and Librium

WASHINGTON (WP) — The first and third most often prescribed drugs in the U.S., the tranquilizers Valium and Librium, will be placed under federal control in late March, making no prescriptions valid for more than six months.

An order published in the Federal Register this week ends a nine-year federal effort to put the two drugs under control. Their sole maker, Hoffman-La Roche Inc., argued for seven of those years that curbs were not needed.

Alarmed by hundreds of reports of suicides and hospital emergency-room admissions, usually for attempted suicide with three out of four reports involving women aged 20 to 39 what was then the Food and Drug Administration's Bureau of Drug Abuse Control first recommended some kind of prescription curb in 1965.

The new order is still subject to change after public or industry comment, but no industry objection is expected since Hoffman-LaRoche has agreed to the regulation.

Between 20 and 25 million prescriptions a year are written for Valium alone, a drug industry source reported. A Hoffman-LaRoche spokesman called prescription and sales figures confidential but did not dispute a government estimate that the drugs' combined sales to pharmacies totaled $132 million in a recent six-month period.

The new controls will also forbid any more than five refills in a six-month period. This will require record- and inventory-keeping by doctors, distributors and manufacturers. Criminal penalties are to be set for illegal use.

Federal officials said they could not estimate how much this will cut the drugs' use. In the past two years a stricter control — no refills and only written prescriptions — has cut amphetamine use by 50 to 60 per cent, Dr. Steven Kennedy of FDA estimated.

Stars and Sticks

Kung Fu Freaks Are Latching On to Deadly Karate Weapons

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

Shuriken stars and nunchaku sticks used to only mean something to Karate experts.

Then along came the Kung Fu television series and the Bruce Lee movies.

Now they are a growing and unrestricted fad among young people. Police are becoming worried. With good reason.

Shurikens are evil little star-shaped piece of pressed metal with eight points each about three inches long. One police officer described the lethal star as having the potential of eight throwing knives.

And nunchakus are two sticks about 14 inches long connected at one end by a four-inch length of chain or twine. With a little bit of practice an adroit swing can inflict serious injury or death.

Both are weapons used in Karate exercises.

But that's not what is worrying police.

It's the discovery in recent months that more and more young people are carrying the weapons — for protection, for intimidation, or simply because it's the in-thing.

"To them it's a fad," a member of the Vancouver police Youth detail said. "However, a lot don't realize just how dangerous these weapons are.

"A shuriken star for example can be tossed into a wall from a distance of 20 feet with ease. Imagine what it could do if aimed at someone's forehead.

"And the nuchaku sticks . . . with a little practice they're deadly."

He said it doesn't take long to be proficient.

"It only takes a couple of hours training."

The weapons are readily available, he said. Shurikens can be bought for $3.50 each at a Karate store on East Hastings, but are not sold here.

Nunchakus sell here for about $7, but more often if the person is bent on using it for an illegitimate purpose he'll make a pair himself.

One set seized in Victoria consisted of two broom handles wrapped with electician's tape and connected by a piece of link chain. The chain was secured to the end of each stick by a nail twisted over.

It is difficult to assess just how widespread the weapons are being used. They first started to appear in youth gangs in the Lower Mainland three or four months ago.

One Victoria policeman said he had already confiscated three sets of sticks from young people checked on the street.

There is one case before the courts here as well as four in Vancouver involving youths charged with possession of a dangerous weapon after police found nunchaku sticks on them.

The court will determine if there was a dangerous purpose in the motive for carrying them.

There is no question they are dangerous.

Victoria Karate expert Lindon Bateson is the first to agree to that but adds "it still depends largely on the person using it."

He teaches the nunchaku stick's correct use — as an accoutrement to a set of pre-arranged movements or kata.

The sticks are popular with the younger crowd, he said, mainly because of the impact of Kung Fu theme movies. He sells wooden as well as plastic "safety" sets, but only to his students.

He shuns shuriken stars.

"I don't think there is anything to learn from using them . . . it's as simple as throwing a rock."

The stars, he said, were once used by the ninja or samuri spies as a weapon to kill silently and swiftly.

However, he employs most other karate weapons, such as the tonfa, a twirling stick with a short perpendicular handle, and the kama, a scythe-like instrument.

Ironically, most of the karate weapons have a peaceful origin.

The nunchaku was a tool for pounding grain or rice as was the tonfa, while the kama was a short farmer's scythe, originally with a metal crescent-shaped blade.

They were first used as weapons in Okinawa in the early 1400s after the Japanese warlords had disallowed the Okinawans from arming themselves.

Jubilee Pharmacist Wins National Award

A young pharmacist at Royal Jubilee Hospital has won a $500 award in a national competition for her thesis on development of a drug-monitoring program right in the wards of the hospital.

Hannah Bradley, 24, who worked on the project while she was completing a pharmacy residency at the hospital last year, will go to Toronto next week to receive the Bristol Award at a meeting of the Canadian Society of Hospital Pharmacists.

What is called "clinical pharmacy" has staff pharmacists moving out of the hospital pharmacy and into some patient wards to watch for potentially incompatible drug combinations being prescribed.

There were 69,433 drug prescriptions dispensed at Jubilee last year. There are about 2,300 strengths and dosage forms of drugs available in the hospital pharmacy and new drugs are appearing all the time. So the pharmacists are actively making their special knowledge in the field available to doctors.

A similar clinical pharmacy program has also been started at Victoria General Hospital.

A two-month pilot project at Jubilee had pharmacists monitoring therapy given all patients in a 29-bed men's medical ward. They provided doctors with a form for comments and drew a general favorable reaction.

One doctor wrote: "This is an excellent approach to the frequently seen misuse and abuse of drugs, drug reactions, interactions, accidental and deliberate overdose."

Said another: "Pharmacy monitoring of drug therapy is especially useful in an old chronic care patient on several drugs . . . unnecessary complications can be prevented in this way."

The monitoring program by pharmacists has since been expanded to cover dispensing of certain drugs in five hospital wards. Long-term objective is to have the program cover the hospital.

Where patients leaving hospital have a complicated routine of medication to maintain, the pharmacists prepare for them a chart showing which drugs are to be taken and when.

Mallard Appointed

Derrick Mallard, 6002 West Saanich, chairman of the court of revision for School District 63 in 1974, has been appointed to the provincial assessment appeal board for 1975.

He is also president of the Citizens' Association to Save the Environment.

Others appointed are Peter Jenewein of Albion, B.C., chairman, and J. Y. Gardner, West Vancouver.

The appointments were made in cabinet orders released Friday.

Pats Return On Feb. 9

Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, 3rd Battalion, will return to Work Point Feb. 9 from joint Canadian-U.S. manoeuvres in Alaska.

The battalion has about 90 men taking part in the exercise designed mainly to test procedures as well as logistical support of Alaskan Command forces, a Canadian Forces spokesman said.

Working Mothers Worry About Curtailed School

The one-hour school day proposed by Greater Victoria school board in case of strike or lockout will have a direct impact on most parents.

"In my estimation it's going to be a great hardship," said Sheila Vradenburgh, president of the Lampson Street elementary school parents' association.

"I'm a working mother and I'm definitely concerned," Mrs. Vradenburgh said.

She said her youngest child is 9 years old so she doesn't have the babysitting problems that working mothers of younger children will be faced with.

"What I'm thinking of more is the educational loss they'll have without the supervision of a teacher," she said.

The board announced Friday that if its non-teaching staff are locked out or go on strike, schools will open for an hour each morning during which teachers will hand out assignments. "This is going to pose a great problem," said Peggy Bridges, president of the George Jay elementary Home and School Association.

Nearly half George Jay's roughly 740 pupils have working mothers, she said, and these mothers will find it almost impossible to get babysitters to care for the youngsters while they're at work.

"Naturally our children are going to fall behind in their work," she added.

Alan Henley, chairman of the parents' advisory council to Central junior secondary school, said he expects parents will be upset.

"Part of the stability of the home is that children can count on certain things," Henley said, and going to school is one of those things.

"Children belong in school," he said.

A two or three-week strike or lockout will cut a fairly big slice out of the school year, he said, particularly at Central where students have just started a new semester.

Henley said he thought single parents will suffer most from the problem of children out of school.

Irene Jones, president of the Willows elementary Parent Teacher Association, said she will be hit by the one-hour school day less than will be working mothers.

"It won't make that much difference to me," she said.

"We've lived through this once before and we survived it," Mrs. Jones added.

She said the length of the strike will make a big difference in how much children's schoolwork is hurt. If it's only a week or so it won't matter much, she said.

The school board's janitors and custodians, Local 382 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, went on strike for three weeks two years ago, causing partial closure of the schools.

Hospitals Get Nod

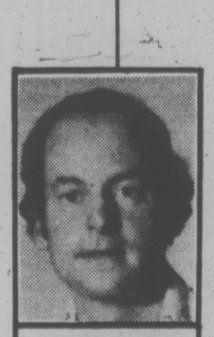
Victoria General Hospital and Mount St. Mary Hospital have both received full accreditation for the next three years.

Accreditation is granted by the Canadian Council on Hospital Accreditation, based in Toronto, and means the hospitals have met national standards of hospital maintenance and patient care. Each hospital is inspected and its procedures examined before a council representative recommends for or against accreditation.

Earlier this week Mount Tolmie, St. Mary's Priory and Glengarry Hospitals received word they had also won full accreditation.

Accreditation inspection at Royal Jubilee Hospital is not due until this fall.

Change Your Lifestyle . . . and Start Living



max low

When I was quite young, my mother bought me a copy of Norman Vincent Peale's "Power of Positive Thinking" — and insisted that I read it.

Her worry was that I never was a very positive youth. And her hope was that the good doctor's philosophies would set me on the road to believing in myself, and to realizing that if one believed enough that something would happen then, sure enough, it would. Happen, that is.

The trouble was, though, despite much of Dr. Peale's fine advice, it became more and more difficult over the years to be positive in an increasingly negative world.

The other day, however, I met a truly "positive" man and it was a refreshing change.

He's Dr. Charles Aharan and he wants to develop a health care service "based on a positive concept of health and utilizing a small multidisciplinary team as a method of delivery."

And he's positive his scheme, a pilot one and the first of its kind in B.C., will work.

But he's not kidding himself. The road ahead is tough. And he knows it.

What's a "positive concept of health," anyway?

"Well," explains Dr. Aharan, "the greatest health problem existing today is the problem of sickness that results from the way we live, from lifestyles. The most important thing is not the removal of communicable diseases but reduction of illness that results from environment and lifestyles.

"And so we are concerned with offering a program that is aimed at reducing the sickness-producing lifestyle as well as treating sickness."

The "we" part of the plan are Dr. Alan Clews, Dr. Ron Lang and Dr. Aharan and his wife Marg. And they are teaming up to provide a sort of re-orientation program for what they call "middle-class" people with an alcohol or drug dependency problem.

The 50-year-old Aharan, a clinical psychologist, has devoted more than 25 years of his life to the problem of alcohol and drug abuse and to the treatment of chemically-dependent people. He's so certain his scheme will work that he has resigned his position as director of research and planning for the provincial Alcohol and Drug Commission to embark on his new venture.

Clews and Lang are both general practitioners who will work on the program on a part-time basis. Marg Aharan is, says Charles, a lay counsellor trained in this field and specializing in group therapy.

The doctors have applied to use part of Oak Bay Manor, the $5.5 million retirement home on Cadboro Bay Road, for their re-oprientation centre. Manor manager Ian Else has sent the application on to the Oak Bay council and there the matter rests, awaiting a public hearing and possible zoning change. But that isn't even Aharan's main problem.

You see, he's been through this mill before, having run a similar centre at Collingwood Acres near Edmonton for two years before coming to B.C. That was a success "from results attained" but, says Aharan, it failed because of inadequate financial support." And that's the sticky problem here, too.

. . . tough road ahead

"Because the economics of the health care system are all focused around the idea of treating diseases, it's tough to get economic support to change lifestyles," the doctor points out.

Aharan has asked the B.C. Alcohol and Drug Commission to subsidize people to attend the program. He believes it will, although the commission has given no guarantee — yet.

"We also hope the health care system may be persuaded to test out this scheme through health care insurance," he says.

At the moment, the only way people could avail themselves of the program is to pay for it themselves.

"We calculate it will cost $35 a day to treat a patient," says Aharan, "and that's quite cheap compared with the Eric Martin Institute, which was $90.70 a day the last time I checked."

Because, as the doctor points out, the majority of facilities available already in B.C. are geared toward "the homeless and socially-deteriorated person" the new plan is aimed at helping middle-class people.

"We are mostly concerned with legalized drugs — alcohol, tranquilizers and sleeping pills — and it's the middle-class people legally supplied these chemicals who are the overwhelming majority of abusers," Aharan says.

It's not just for alcoholics and drug users, though. Aharan feels the program should be made available to "all troubled people" and the doctors will involve themselves with family problems and marriage counselling.

A total of 28 patients will stay at the centre for a 28-day course and after that each patient will attend three "renewal weekends" at three-month intervals after his discharge to see how he is making out.

Many, including businessmen and housewives, will be sent to the centre by their doctors but Aharan hopes that a large number will be "problem employees" referred by big companies. Only those who are "dry and physically capable of functioning under a rigorous program" will be admitted.

A typical day will begin at 8:30 a.m. with a meeting directing the patients' attention to the program of that day. Then there will be discussion-lectures, body sensory programs such as Yoga, group psycho-therapy, films with an introduction to Alcoholics Anonymous, and finally self-awareness exercises.

The whole thing, says Aharan, is structured around getting the patient to help himself. At the end of each day he will write a log of the events when he will be expected to answer such questions as "Well, how did you do today, Joe? When did you get mad? How did you feel?"

It's all designed to get people to break their dependency on chemicals and to help them appreciate life.

"Being healthy isn't just the absence of disease, you know," ventures Aharan. "The more fulfilled you are, the more you live up to expectations, the more healthy you are.

"Health services are geared toward saving life, prolonging life — and this is terrific — but the real health problem now is discovering the technology that contributes to the quality of life."

Penguin, Seal Problems

NEW YORK (CP) — Money problems in Pittsburgh and an old $3-million lawsuit brought by a former Oakland owner were two of the prime topics being discussed at the National Hockey League meeting here today.

Whether the Penguins leave Pittsburgh and California Seals depart from Oakland may well hinge on the decisions taken by the NHL's board of governors.

Thayer Potter, owner of the Penguins, has faced a shortage of cash to keep the club going and is seeking new long-term investment. His cash needs are reported between $500,000 and $1 million.

He will report to the governors on his efforts to raise additional capital. Borrowing from the league may be another possibility. That means the other clubs might be asked to lend Pittsburgh some money.

The Penguins, unbeaten in their last 16 games at home, have started drawing sellout crowds. They are in third place in the Norris Division and seem to be a shoo-in for the playoffs for the first time in three seasons.

Potter has insisted that the Penguins will not leave Pittsburgh. He has gone ahead with plans to add 2,000 seats in the Civic Arena, which can seat 13,402 for hockey.

The NHL also is getting closer to a decision on the California franchise. The league bought out owner Charles O. Finley for $6.5 million last year and is operating the franchise.

But the NHL cannot move the Seals elsewhere until there is a settlement of the lawsuit brought by Barend von Gerbig, head of the group that originally owned the Seals from 1967 to 1969.

Von Gerbig sued the NHL for refusing to allow him to transfer the franchise, a big money loser in Oakland from its inception. He brought an antitrust action against the league.

Lawyers for both sides want to settle out of court and chances for a settlement are reported good. Obviously, the governors will have to decide what to pay the man.

The governors also will hear a report on the yerbabuena development program which includes building a sports centre in downtown San Francisco.

If there is a reasonably good chance that the arena will be built, the league could decide to keep the Seals in Oakland for the time being, pending a shift across the bay to San Francisco under new owners.

The NHL-appointed administrators have been running "a tight ship" in Oakland, keeping costs down, and there has been a healthy increase at the box office although California is in last place in the Adams Division.

Seattle and Denver both have conditional franchises in the NHL for the 1976-77 season, but their arenas will be ready next season. The owners of the franchises want to begin play in 1975-76. Thus there have been plenty of rumors making the rounds that Oakland will end up in Denver and Pittsburgh in Seattle next season.

But NHL officials deny this is the case right now.

Chief Cat Is Purring

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

The Cougar who roared in January made the turn into February on a purring note.

Victoria owner-coach Pat Ginnell made his peace with other Western Canada Hockey League executives and turned to concentrate on what he likes best—"winning hockey games."

The truce was signified Friday by Ginnell's public apology to league president Ed Chynoweth of Saskatoon and the WCHL governors.

In a prepared statement, Ginnell said he was aware of the governors' concern that some of his recent statements "did nothing but harm the league."

He admitted he "was very worked up" over recent incidents that produced suspensions to himself and three of his players as well as a $1,000 fine. Ginnell agrees, the statement added, "he did not mean some of them."

The fine and a three-game suspension were assessed Ginnell by Chynoweth following a recent road trip to Manitoba. In addition, Kim Clackson was suspended for six games, Eric Sanderson for three and Lorry Gloeckner for one.

The suspensions have ended for all but Clackson, who went to his Saskatoon home instead of returning to Victoria. Ginnell said Friday Clackson will rejoin the team today and serve the remainder of his suspension (three more games) to discount any threats of the defenceman retiring from hockey.

Both Ginnell and Sanderson will mark their "return to action" at Memorial Arena tonight when the Cougars play Winnipeg Clubs.

After issuing his apology Friday, which included a referenee that Chynoweth "is the president of the league and has the authority to make those (suspension) decisions," Ginnell added:

"It's over and done. Let's forget it ever happened and concentrate on winning hockey games."

On the ice, Saskatoon Blades ended a 12-game winless streak on the road by defeating Calgary Centennials 7-3 while in Regina, the Lethbridge Broncos defeated the Pats 5-3.

Belmont Recovery Shows

By D'ARCY KAVANAUGH
Times Staff

Belmont Braves' coach Bill Spotswood had a relieved look on his face Friday night, and for good reason.

Not only had his charges just defeated Mt. Douglas Rams, 68-66, in a thrilling contest at Belmont to move into first place in "A" division of the Greater Victoria High School Boys' Basketball League, but they played their best basketball in weeks in doing so.

"Tonight was our 14th game this month and that's just too many, which is my mistake. We played poorly midway through the month and only started to get going half-way through the Tillicum tournament last weekend," said Spotswood.

"But tonight showed the boys have recovered. They played real well in beating one of the class teams in this league."

Friday was a long night for Spotswood and his Mt. Doug counterpart, Dale Bate, as they watched the lead shuffle back and forth between the teams.

Belmont dominated the early stages of the contest, taking a 16-7 lead and threatening to run the Rams off the court.

But the Braves got careless in the second half and the Rams, behind John McManaman's excellent shooting and rebounding, bounced back to take a 38-31 half-time lead.

Braves cut down on their mistakes in the third stanza and rallied for a 54-52 lead going into the final 10 minutes.

Both teams held the lead at least twice in the final quarter and the victory wasn't decided until Belmont's Dave English connected on a 30-foot jump shot with just two seconds remaining to play.

While it was English's heroics which gave the Braves the thrilling win, the team's top performer was unheralded Rick Reece, who scored a game high 26 points, most on long, outside shots.

"Tonight was the best game Rick has played for us all season. He was just great in that final quarter," said Spotswood.

Besides Reece's 26-point output, the Braves got 15 points from David English and 10 from Bruce English.

Bob Spanier topped the Rams with 20 points with McManaman adding 17, 13 of them in the first half, and Tommy Watson 15.

In league play at Dunsmuir, Esquimalt Dockers relegated the Demons to sole possession of last place in "A" division by defeating the Demons 88-62. Bob Vandeford had 21 points for the Dockers while Greg Witt led the Demons with 21.

At Reynolds, Gord Gummer checked in with 21 points to spark Spectrum to a 56-55 victory over the Roadrunners. Greg McInis led Reynolds with 20 points.

In exhibition play, Vic High Totems received a 20-point performance from centre Forrest Partington as they upset No. 1 ranked Abbotsford Panthers, 70-66, at Vic High, and Oak Bay Bays edged No. 5 ranked North Surrey Spartans, 63-59, at Oak Bay. Steve Pescod sparked the Bays with 23 points.

North Vancouver edged Oak Bay 44-36 while McNair defeated Spectrum of Victoria in Friday's other games.

DERBY PRICES CLIMB

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — It's going to cost quite a bit more for those who want to go first class at the Kentucky Derby.

Churchill Downs has announced it is raising prices for all tickets, and a 16-seat table in the choice fourth-floor clubhouse section will now retail at $1,840 for Derby Day, which is May 3, and the day before the derby.

It's the biggest ($240) increase, but not the biggest percentage of increase. General admission is now $10, almost double the 1974 tariff, when infield tickets sold for $5 and grandstand seats were $6.

Ramblers Ready For Tiger Fight

Impressive Friday performances put both Mt. Douglas Ramblers and Victoria High Tigers "in the mood" for an important Tuesday meeting.

Mt. Doug, with the only blot on its Victoria Inter-High Senior Girls' Basketball League record a default ot Claremont, took over first place in "A" division Friday by trouncing Belmont 61-29.

Shelly Godfrey's 16 points and 12 by Patti Pesklevits sparked Victoria, the only undefeated team in league play, to a 51-32 exhibition victory over First United Unitys, a junior women's team.

Ramblers face the Tigers Tuesday at Vic High.

In North Vancouver Friday, Donna and Linda Rogers scored 11 and eight points to spark Reynolds to a 41-29 romp over Pemberton and a semi-final berth in an eight-team invitational tournament.

Reynolds met host North Van this afternoon with the winners advancing to the final against the McNair-Prince of Wales winner.

Series Even

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (UPI) — Lefthander Roscoe Tanner needed only one hour to outclass Roberto Chavez, 6-1, 6-3, 6-3, Friday to give the United States a split of the opening Davis Cup matches with Mexico after Raul Ramirez upset former Forest Hills and Wimbledon champion Stan Smith, 3-6, 6-4, 6-1, 8-6.

BLUES QUELL FLAMES

ATLANTA — Good goaltending by Dan Bouchard kept Atlanta Flames in the battle until the final minute, but unassisted goals by Garry Unger and Billl Collins wrecked his effort Friday and gave St. Louis Blues a 4-2 National Hockey League victory.

Unger erased a 1-0 Atlanta lead late in the first period and the Flames moved ahead in the second session when they got tallies from rookie defenseman Bob Hess and Collins while blasting 18 shots at Bouchard.

WHA Sued

DETROIT (AP) — A group which held the franchise to Michigan Stags has sued the World Hockey Association, League president Dennis Murphy and the WHA trustees for $450,000.

The suit, filed in federal court here by Metro Sports Associates, charged the WHA was fraudulent in its actions which persuaded Metro to buy the franchise.

Vikings' Calgary Hop Both Rough and Tough

Things were tough for the Vikings and rough for the Vikettes when the University of Victoria teams rolled into Calgary for Canada West University Athletic Association basketball games Friday.

The Gary Taylor-coached Vikings had their first-place position atop the men's league weakened when Calgary Dinosaurs upset Victoria 74-61.

The loss enabled Alberta Golden Bears to close to within four points of the Vikings with an 81-77 triumph over British Columbia Thunderbirds.

More upsetting to Taylor, however, was the loss of forward Jim Dudderidge. Vikings' top scorer and rebounder was taken to hospital with a possible concussion after hitting his head on the floor.

Vikings felt his absence in the late stages. Although UVic shot 57 per cent from the field, Calgary rebounders dominated the boards by picking off the ball 29 times. The Vikings grabbed only 17 rebounds.

In addition, Vikings were charged with 25 turnovers.

Vikettes defeated the Dinnies handily, 80-46, in a rough game marred by 53 fouls. Vikettes suffered a number of bruises but the most serious hurt was a knee injury to Jan Nowell.

Victory kept Vikettes' title hopes alive even though the leading UBC Thunderettes, winning their 12th game in 13 starts, defeated Alberta Pandas 54-50. Saskatchewan Huskiettes stayed on Victoria's heels by defeating Lethbridge 53-40 in another women's game.

In the only other men's game, Saskatchewan Huskies bowed 93-68 to the Pronghorns in Lethbridge.

Status in Title

QUEBEC — Barbara Berezowski and David Peter are looking forward to the world figure skating championships now that they have finally the Canadian senior dance crown.

"They have a much better chance now that they are going as Canadian champions rather than as second-place finishers," said Marijane Stong, coach of the Toronto skaters.

All seven judges ranked the pair first as they won handily over Susan Carseallen and Eric Gillies of Toronto. The winners skated superbly despite the fact Berezowski performed with a bandaged knee as the result of an accident suffered during an exhibition performancte in Victoria last month.

Shelley MacLeod and Bob Knapp of Ontario won the bronze medal while B.C.'s only performers, Debbie and Randy Burke of Chilliwack, finished fifth and last.

Three other gold medals were awarded Friday. Kevin Hicks, 15, of Windsor won the junior men's singles, Camille Rebus of Edmonton the junior women's singles, while Judie Jeffcott and Keith Swindlehurst of Ontario took the junior dance.

Susan Anderson of the Victoria Racquet Club and partner Jerry Berry, a native of Nanaimo, finished 11th in the junior dance.

Eleventh also was the position of Victoria's Oliver Coomes in the novice men's singles after Friday's opening program. Rick O'Neill of Toronto was the novice leader.

Hicks beat out silver medallist Jim Szabo of Coquitlam and Toronto's Gary Beacom in a tight, three-way fight for the junior men's title. Ken Moir of Vancouver was fourth.

Toller Cranston of Toronto and Lynn Nightingale of Ottawa tightened their grips on the senior singles titles with strong performances in the compulsory free-skating competition.

Cranston, a virtual certainty to capture his fifth consecutive senior men's title in the free skating today, received marks in the 5.8 and 5.9 range—within a fraction of perfect sixes.

Sundevils Romp Into Semi-Finals

Defending champion Belmont-Fisher displayed the most impressive form Friday as the Sundevils led a four-team charge into the semi-finals of the Victoria Police Athletic Association's annual junior high boys' basketball tournament.

Sundevils, with Tom LeQuesne and Bob Schroeder each contributing 16 points, overpowered Arbutus 80-42 at Belmont-Fisher. Jay Tyson topped Arbutus with 13 points.

Colquitz, Lansdowne and Cedar Hill also won opening-round games.

The day's individual performance was turned in by Rick Jeffery. He set a tournament record by popping in 29 points but it failed to save Dunsmuir. Colquitz rallied from a 25-24 half-time deficit to edge Dunsmuir 62-50.

Harbindar Shanghana scored 24 points for Colquitz, including 16 in a tide-turning third quarter.

Craig Higgins scored 22 points as Lansdowne defeated Highrock 60-41 and Gary Law led Cedar Hill to a 73-49 victory over Central. Bill Barber, with 20, was high man for Highrock while Bryan Cathcart, with 18, was Central's best.

The eight-team tournament resumed this morning and winds up tonight.

NFL Won't Abandon Contract, Yet

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The National Football League says it is not ready to abandon the standard player contract or its recently concluded draft despite a federal court ruling in the Joe Kapp case that will keep it from appealing for perhaps a year or more.

Judge William Sweigert of United States District Court ruled Friday that the NFL may not appeal the case—which declared illegal parts of the standard player contract and draft and all of the Rozelle Rule—until damages have been set.

Sweigert set May 19 for the jury trial to decide how much money the NFL must give Kapp, and Kapp says he will ask for $10 million. That means a substantial delay in any appeal.

But in the meantime, the NFL insists it will be business as usual.

"From a legal standpoint, today's developments neither clarify nor advance the situation beyond the court's earlier memorandum decision," the league said. "The merits of that decision are, in our attorneys' judgment, very much in doubt.

"Accordingly, we have no immediate plans for any change in our practices pending final determination of these issues, either through the judicial system or by collective bargaining between the NFL clubs and the players."

The decision by Sweigert indeed neither clarified nor advanced the situation, which is that the standard player contract, Rozelle Rule and part of the college draft violate antitrust laws. Sweigert ruled Dec. 20 that they restricted a player's ability to freely negotiate his services.

And although all the ramifications of this latest decision are not clear, the NFL now faces the possibility that this week's draft was illegal. And the contracts to which the NFL now will try to sign selected draftees also may be illegal.

The NFL can't appeal now and may very well have to begin its pre-season games under the current Sweigert ruling.

Thus, the NFL may be forced into modifying the draft; it may have to rewrite its standard player contract. Or it may actually do nothing, resulting possibly in more suits, refusals to sign contracts and chaos.

Swiss skiers swept the first three places of the Arlberg-Kandahar mens World Cup downhill at Megevem France, today in a race marred by serious accidents.

Walter Vesti scored his first World Cup victory, ahead of his Swiss teammates Rene Berthod and Phillippe Roux.

But the race was interrupted for more than an hour when David Zwilling, the Austrian world downhill champion, and Briton Konrad Bartleski crashed at high speed. Both were flown by helicopter to Salanches Hospital. Doctors said the Briton regained consciousness during the helicopter ride and was suffering from severe concussion and a cut face and that Zwilling had a severely bruised thigh.

Three other favorites, Franz Klammer, the Austrian who had won all six previous downhills this year, his teammate Werner Grissman and Swiss Bernard Russi also fell.

Curlers Hit Vague Note When the Buzzer Sounds

CURLING
ernie fedoruk

Virtually every club on Vancouver Island limits the length of league and bonspiel games with the application of the "buzzer" regulation.

When the buzzer goes, you finish the end you are playing, plus one more.

Sounds simple.

But if the buzzer cuts the ending razor-thin, problems can be created.

Picture this: Skip throwing the last rock of the end has delivered. The stone is moving into the house at the other end when the buzzer sounds.

Now the question: Do you play one more end, or two?

The answer is one. Because the stone had NOT come to a COMPLETE HALT, the end was still "being played" when the buzzer sounded.

If, on the other hand, the rock has just stopped moving and THEN the buzzer sounds, the rinks are allowed to play two more ends.

I have seen the rule misinterpreted many times by rinks that were in the process of removing stones after a completed end when the buzzer sounded. The rinks proceeded to play only one more end when technically they were entitled to two more.

Many curlers are rather vague about the ruling. For one thing, it is a club rule — and not a rule of curling.

Maybe the novelty of mixed curling is wearing off, but only seven rinks from the Greater Victoria area are entered in the Island playdowns at Campbell River Feb. 14-16.

Victoria and the Racquet Club each have three contenders. Bill Crothers is skipping Esquimalt's lone entry and, somewhat surprisingly, Playland is without a challenger.

Steve Skillings, Don Matheson and Harvey Thomson are skipping the Racquet Club entries while Harvey Hodge, John Innes and Jim Fennell will carry Victoria's colors.

The host Campbell River club shows greatest interest with six rinks while Duncan supplies five. Two Courtenay and a pair of Nanaimo foursomes complete the 22-rink field.

Bert Wright, Gwyn Hughes, Fred Duncan, Glen Harper and Ralph Fulford have entered the Duncan rinks while Campbell River will be represented by Don Perriman, Danny Lukinuk, Pat Riley, Gaye Enns, George Bayford and Wayne McLennan.

Craig MacRae and Norm Thiessen are the Nanaimo hopefuls while Courtenay's contenders are Vern Lewis and Bill Ballance.

The annual Kiwanis men's bonspiel has been most popular, especially with non-club members who were able to obtain entry.

Members of the service club had to show on each rink but, at times, it was difficult to "police" the order.

This year, this is no restriction. The Kiwanians also are going one step further than opening the event to non-club members. Women, too.

It will be mixed 'spiel, at Playland Feb. 4-9 with a limit of 64 rinks.

A feature of the Kiwanis 'spiel that appeals to many curlers is the call for eight-end games.

Boxers Bomb Playoff Foe

London Boxing Club got away to an impressive start Friday in the opening game of the Vancouver Island Hockey League's round-robin playoffs.

Boxers, always in command, trounced CFB Esquimalt Buccaneers 11-2 in the opening of the three-team, six-game round-robin series.

Esquimalt faces University of Victoria Vikings next Friday at the Sports Centre.

Jack Richardson, with three, and Brian Hamilton and Bob Lucas with two goals, sparked Boxers' attack. Wally Poppoff, Al McLaren, Mark Purdy and Bob Boyd scored one each.

Al Thompson and Rick Wing scored for Bucs.

Ed Hastings played a strong game in goal for the winners, stopping 32 shots. Joe Rozon and Norm Allen combined to stop 27 shots for Esquimalt.

Scorpions Open Playoff Sunday

Bob Burrows will be hoping to demonstrate Sunday in Vancouver the skill that has made him this season's scoring champion in the Dogwood Inter-City Senior "A" Men's Basketball League.

Bob's shooting feats helped the Scorpions finish the regular season in first place and the Victorians open their best-of-three semi-final playoff Sunday against either North Shore Mountaineers or Burnaby-New Westminster Broncos.

Those two finished in a fourth-place deadlock and are slated to clash tonight to decide which club moves into the four-team playoffs.

Vancouver Capilanos, last year's Canadian champions, will tangle with Richmond Ramblers in the other semi-final.

Two other Scorpions — Brian Mackenzie and Dave Morgan — joined Burrows in the top 10 on the scoring list.

Burrows swished shots for 25.7-point average over 16 games to lead the point parade while Burnaby's Derek Sankey took the runner-up berth with a 23.7 mark.

MacKenzie wound up in the fifth spot with a 21.1 average and Morgan was ninth with a 19.1 scoring rate.

Fired-Up Palmer Not Dilly-Dallying

HONOLULU (AP) — Eddie Pearce kept hearing cries of glee rolling out of the gallery that was trailing a couple of holes behind him. It was Arnie's Army.

"That hotdog," said Pearce, 22, with a big smile, referring to the man who has been his long-time idol. "Why doesn't someone tell him to retire?"

But Arnold Palmer, 45 and a non-winner for two years, has no intention of retiring. He is determined to regain some of the form that made him the most popular golfer ever and won him 61 tour titles.

"I made up my mind that this year I'm gonna concentrate on golf," said Palmer. "I'm gonna quit dilly-dallying around. I'm gonna play more golf. Whether the results will be good or bad, I can't say.

In Friday's second round of the $220,000 Hawaiian Open, he matched the best round of the day with a five-under-par 67 that vaulted him to within one stroke of half-way leader Al Geiberger.

Geiberger's 69 and a 135 total left him one stroke clear of Palmer, Pearce, Forrest Fezler and Gary Groh.

Pearce had a 69 with a grab-bag set of borrowed clubs. His regular set has been stolen. Groh took another 68 and Fezler had a 67.

Jack Nicklaus, the defending champion, was seven strokes off the pace with a 74 for 142.

George Knudson of Toronto had another 72 for 144.

Lee Trevino, the PGA king and a former Hawaiian Open champion, failed to qualify for the final two rounds. He played his last nine in 40, had a 75 and a 150 total.

Trueman Beaten

VANCOUVER — A Victoria rink skipped by Jack Trueman was the first to qualify for the Pacific Coast Curling Association's men's final, but the trip into provincial windup won't be as rapid or as easy.

The degree of difficulty was served on the Victorians Friday when Nanaimo's Harvey Thiessen defeated the Trueman rink 11-5 in the opening round of the eight-rink Coast showdown.

Trueman, supported by Harvey Hodge, Ron Bowes and Greg Smith, qualified for the Coast event through the Totem bonspiel in November, as did Chilliwack's Jake Block.

Friday, the Victorians couldn't find their best form and were relegated by Theissen into the last-chance, "B" side of the double-knockout playdowns.

Block, who had to defeat Victoria's Ray Benwell in a playoff for the other qualifying spot from the November bonspiel here, also fell Friday.

Vic Wood of Vancouver, stealing an important two on the 10th end, defeated Block 11-9 to move into the "A" semi-finals against Larry McLaughlin of Richmond.

McLaughlin edged Nanaimo's Jack Taylor 10-7 while Gene Kraus of Vancouver defeated Cloverdale's Gary Sigurdson 8-5 in Friday's other games.

TOROS BLANK BLAZERS

TORONTO (CP) — Sophomore centre Wayne Dillon broke a 12-game personal scoring slump with a goal at 4:38 of the third period to cap a 6-0 Toronto Toros' victory over Vancouver Blazers in a World Hockey Association game Friday night.

A crowd of 10,333 saw goalie Gilles Gratton make 33 saves to collect his second shutout of the season.

It was the Toros' fourth consecutive victory and pulled them to within four points of the leading Quebec Nordiques in the Canadian Division.

Lakers Rebound To Blast Blues

LAKE COWICHAN — It didn't take Lake Cowichan very long to regain its winning touch in the South Island Big Six Hockey League.

Upset 10-8 by Stocker North Americans on Thursday, the league-leading Lakers came back Friday to defeat Chemainus Blues 7-2 at Lake Cowichan Arena.

Lakers unleashed 48 shots at Ron Bourcier in the Chemainus goal while Brent Kneen handled 25 drives by the Blues.

Doug Hanna scored three times for Lakers. Ken Calder, Bob Hall, Rick Boyd and Wayne Dividson added singles.

Bob Wilson and Vern Lambourne connected for Chemianus.

PERSPECTIVES AND PREJUDICES

The Religious Side of Burns

By REV. J. A. DAVIDSON

The popular image of Robert Burns seems that of a two-fisted carouser who wrote a few memorable songs and some unintelligible poems which are suitable only for Scots to inflict on one another when they celebrate his birthday, Jan. 25, each year, as they did a week ago. This image discourages us from taking Burns seriously as a religious reformer — which indeed he was. A poet of a century later, W. E. Henley, described his so-called "ecclesiastical satires" as "certainly the most brilliant series of assaults ever delivered against the practical bigotry of the Kirk."

Burns was influenced as a child by his father, a religious moderate who rejected the then fashionable rigidities of Scottish Calvinism. In his youth Burns seems to have rejected the Christian interpretation of life, but in his late twenties he began to mose toward mature faith, and in the closing years of his life (he died at 37) he tended in the direction of moderate Calvinism.

The popular Calvinism in Scotland tended to be hard and harsh, and it was against this that Burns wielded his satirical rapier. Probably the most effective of his religious satires is "Holy Willies's Prayer", written about william Fisher, an Ayrshire farmer and an elder in the Kirk. Willie was a pious busybody, with skill at both detecting the sins of others and at explaining away his own sins. His piety was ostentatious, but he did at times over-indulge in whiskey and was later caught in sexual misconduct.

Willie was instrumental in having the local Kirk-session try Gavin Hamilton, a friend of Burns's, for alleged Sabbath desecration. The session reprimanded Hamilton, and he appealed, successfully, to the Presbytery of Ayr. The incident infuriated Burns, and this led to the poem which purports to be Willie Fisher's prayer to Almighty God immediately after the loss of the case against Hamilton.

In the opening stanza Willie thanks God that he is one of the elect, "a guide, a buckler, an example" for others. Then he confesses a little personal weakness: "But yet, O Lord, confess I Must, — At times I'm fashed wi' fleshly lust." But this, he explains to God, is simply a way of testing him because of his spiritual and moral excellence. He then tells God about sinners — such as the Gavin Hamiltons — who refuse to be guided by the consciences of the Willie Fishers. Willie finishes on a strong note of thanksgiving, praising God for having given him such an exemplary character.

"Holy Willie's Prayer" never degenerates, as do so many exercises in satire, into mere invective. The irony is enhanced by the mock-liturgical tone of the whole poem and by the subtle use of biblical language in at least a dozen places. Burns causes Willie to lay bare his soul without in any way ruffling his splendid conceit. (Among Burn's other poems with a similar thrust are "The Holy Fair", "The Ordination", and "The Kirk's Alarm.",

The warm humanity which is characteristic of Scottish Presbyterianism at its best owes much to Burns. With his poetic satire he helped cut the restricting ropes of ingrown and perverted Calvinism and helped show the vitality of simple, moderate Calvinism. A few years ago a Scottish writer, A. G. Reekie, pointed out that "Calvinism in the middle of the eighteenth century in Scotland had degenerated into a religion of terror and torment" and that Burns "raised great gusts of laughter which swept the black terror out of the House of God." As John Buchan, the first Lord Tweedsmuir, wrote, Burns was "the reformer who flahed the lantern of satire into many foul corners."

Grey Whale Takes Break At Alcatraz

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—A grey whale that took the wrong turn into San Francisco Bay has apparently navigated back to sea.

The 30-foot speckled mammal was last spotted off Alcatraz Island near the Golden Gate bridge after it had gone into the shallow area near the long San Francisco-Oakland Bay Bridge.

"He was just basking and spouting and taking it easy," Fred Kemp, a state game warden aboard the patrol boat Tuna, said. "We followed him for a while. He surfaced twice, then went down and never came up again."

Kemp said at least one grey whale wanders into the bay each year about this time while the leviathan herds are on an annual migration from the Bering Sea to their breeding grounds off the coast of Baja California, Mexico.

Lifeline Clinic Awaits Approval For New Centre

Workers at Victoria's Lifeline clinic can hardly wait for two certain okays.

Approval from both the provincial government and Saanich municipality will mean the workers can open a halfway house at 1834 Haultain as part of their drug rehabilitation program.

The house must be a registered community care facility before accepting more than two live-in clients.

Lifeline House at 2832 Blanshard has been the operation's headquarters since it was started in 1973 by the Upper Room Society.

The House is a Christ-centred home for addicts who decide they want a focus in life other than daily needles.

"We offer a relationship with Christ to be a focus," said John King who runs the centre along with Phyllis Kitchen.

People need a focus from which to draw strength, he said.

"There have been times in my life when I've been utterly incapable of depending on my inner strength. But I have a strength in Christ that surpasses any I've ever had."

Lifeline's program avoids trying to make addicts rely solely on themselves but to choose Christ for support.

It also provides the heavily-charged emotional shock therapy of some rehabilitation centres.

"A person can't be humiliated into loving himself. When a person comes to love himself he'll stop using drugs," said King.

"We don't try to convert everyone here, and make no demands ,other than (that addicts) follow our program."

That program consists of "cold turkey withdrawal," regular urinalysis to ensure clients are not taking drugs, and participation in activities centre workers engage in. Church services of various kinds form the hub of these activities.

Trained as a counsellor and a therapist, King says, "I don't try to treat problems in a standard sense. People are basically spiritual beings. Unless a man's in tune with his spiritual creator" no other types of therapy work.

He is convinced exposure to Christian principles is the key to problem solving.

Workers at Lifeline represent various Christian denominations. They, and King in particular, spend much of their time securing donations from churches and individuals who keep the program just barely in the black.

Government assistance has been asked for only once, and refused by the B.C. Drug and Alcohol Commission.

WE SALUTE THE WINNER!

Mr. N. C. "Cam" McCallum, President and General Manager of McCallum Motors presents Mrs. Maureen Busfield of 4095 Glanford with an ounce of GOLD.
Of all the entries received in McCallum Motors "Win the Gold" Contest, no one guessed the exact distance covered by the Datsun B210 driven by Sportcaster Gorde Hunter. However, there were twelve people within one-tenth of a mile at 304. Of those twelve, Mrs. Busfield's name was drawn for the ounce of gold!
Congratulations Mrs. Busfield from the staff and management of McCallum Motors, and many thanks to those people who took time to help make this promotion a great success.
P.S. 304.1 miles on a tank of regular gas (9.6 gallons) works out to 31.677 miles to the gallon. When you bear in mind that this driving was done with many short trips and cold weather starts, it's no wonder they call the Datsun B210 the "Economy Champ"

Church Union Moving Closer

By ELEANOR BOYLE
Times Staff

Anglican and United faithful in Victoria may find themselves standing side by side soon.

Union of various Christian denominations is being talked about all over the world. In this country no groups are closer to taking the step than the Anglican Church of Canada, United Church of Canada and Christian Church (Disciples of Christ) in Canada.

Rev. Canon Hilary Butler, program director of the Anglican diocese of B.C., has watched and taken part in union plans.

"I'm convinced it's the right way," he said in a recent interview. "It's ludicrous for Christians to go around self-contentedly when they're divided.

"In the New Testament it's quite clear Christ wanted all Christians to be one. But when it comes to particular proposals on union, Christians do in fact find themselves divided."

Splits began in the Reformation, a religious movement of the 1500s which established Protestantism as an alternative to Catholicism, he said.

"Now theologians of both Catholic and Protestant faiths are realizing that Reformation disputes were largely differences of words," he said.

"The Anglican Church is in an unusual position in history. It has always considered itself both Catholic and Reformed. On the whole, most Anglicans dislike being labelled Protestant. They like to think they're carrying on the Catholic tradition, but without (believing in) papal infallibility.

Butler was a member of the General Commission on Church Union, set up in 1967 to study the possible merger of United and Anglican churches in Canada. Principles of Union published in 1965 by a joint church committee had already been approved by both Anglican General Synod and United Church General Council.

In 1969 the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ) decided to back the union concept and join the ranks.

They hardly swelled those ranks, however. Their following is about 6,000 in Canada, with little representation in the West, while Anglican and United church memberships are each about one million according to latest figures.

In 1972 the Commission made public a written Plan of Union and By-Laws which have been debated around the country ever since and revised by the Commission before it was disbanded then replaced by the Committee on Union and Joint Mission.

The Plan called the new unified church The Church of Christ in Canada.

"Many people feel not enough revision has been done," said Butler. Events this year will decide whether officials of all three churches consider the Plan ready to go to popular vote in 1976.

In the United Church, a general council meeting is scheduled for June when about 460 delegates from around the country will rule on giving the go-ahead to presbyteries and congregations.

In the Anglican Church, the national executive will decide next month what guidance on the matter to give general synod, the body making the final decision this year on putting the vote to congregations.

Part of that national executive meeting will be a first-ever joint one with all three churches.

Should the union question actually go to popular vote, every person over the age of 16 registered as a member of the Anglican Church of Canada in a parish will be allowed a ballot, and the two other churches will have similar rules for eligibility.

But more than a straight majority is needed for the momentous step of union. A two-thirds favorable vote will be required among Uniteds and a full three-quarters among Anglicans.

"Almost the whole church has to be agreed. It's so important to individual lives," said Butler.

What are the pros and cons of union?

Anglicans opposing the move fear the remoteness of a larger bureaucracy and possible changes in their life-long ways or worship.

Other Anglicans who have studies of the Plan of Union are afraid their bishops' powers may be limited by committees planned as a compromise between current hierarchical structures.

BUTLER
. . . it's right

Butler believes these fears are unfounded or small in comparison to the benefits of union.

"Individual congregations may go on worshipping as before, although there may be changes (in some places)," he said.

He drew a mental picture of Prairie and northern communities likely to see changed services. Where both Anglican and United congregations now exist, each served on alternate Sundays by visiting clergy, a minister of the unified church might combine the services so everyone can worship each week.

What are the differences in services now?

"Anglicans emphasize the eucharist, while United (ministers) place more emphasis on preaching, and traditionally have only four eucharists a year.

"Anglicans kneel to pray. United (congregations) usually just bow their heads," he added.

The concept of infant baptism posed a problem in the drawing up of the Plan. Christian Church Disciples dispute this point of dogma agreed to by both United and Anglican faithful.

After debate the Commission decided to make this a matter of conscience within a unified church.

Butler admitted some of the points of difference were small ones.

"We're all children in this matter. Silly things come up when talking about union, such as 'how do pray without kneeling?' "

He expressed hope that children of the future will find change an easier process and that Church union will move toward new educational outlooks in religion.

"What we need is an education which will challenge us to go beyond the limitations of our upbringing," he said.

OUTREACH TARGET

Parishioners of Emmanuel Baptist are being encouraged into outreach work as part of the important task of lay ministry.

The Church by the Lake, or Elk Lake Baptist, is one target of that outreach work.

Ministers of both churches hope co-operation will mean Elk Lake will benefit from excess manpower often generated in larger churches.

Areas of need in the smaller parish are in song leadership, ushering, Sunday school organization and supervising of young people's fellowship.

Rev. Ted Follows of Elk Lake and Emmanuel Baptist clergy have decided people helping in such outreach programs should set themselves time limits on their involvement.

Limits will encourage them to set goals in their ministry and work more enthusiastically for the given time developing the talents of Elk Lake parishioners, said Follows.

STARVATION MEAL OFFERED TONIGHT

Man does not live by bread alone, but without religious bread he cannot live, say members of the League of Mercy.

A simple meal of rice and tea will be held by the league tonight at 5:30 in Victoria's Salvation Army Citadel, 757 Pandora St., to help people remember their hungry neighbors.

League members want participants to make the dinner their only meal for 24 hours, but all people are invited even for one meal's participation.

Each person should bring a bowl, mug, spoon and whatever monetary contribution they think is warranted.

After supper there will be a program with guest speakers Dr. and Mrs. J. Myerhoff who ministered to survivors of the recent hurricane disaster in Honduras.

The Myerhoffs have first-hand knowledge of the pain starvation causes after their experience in that country.

Oriental Art Expert Lecturing in City

An illustrated talk entitled Chinese-Japanese Art, a Leisurely Comparison, will be given at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria, Tuesday at 8:30 p.m.

The speaker is Peter Swann, internationally known authority on Asian art and former director of the Royal Ontario Museum in Toronto.

Swann first came into prominence as curator of Asian art at Oxford's Ashmolean Museum, where his installations of Chinese and Japanese art were widely acclaimed.

He is the author of several books on Asian art and is also editor of Oriental Art, the English-speaking world's leading scholarly journal in the Asian field.

He is spending several days at the gallery studying its extensive oriental collection and giving seminars to the staff.

The project is being financed by a Canada Council grant.

Federal Grant to new home buyers

If you are buying a new home for the first time and you move into it at any time from November 1, 1974, to October 31, 1975, you may qualify for a recently introduced $500 Federal Government grant to assist new home buyers. The grants are available from Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation and are subject to certain terms and conditions including the following:

■ You must be purchasing your first home ■ The unit must be your principal place of residence ■ The home must be a new unit that has never been occupied and it must be at least 65% completed ■ Members of a co-operative housing association who occupy units in the co-operative project are eligible for the grant ■ Mobile homes qualify provided they carry CSA certification number Z240 ■ The total purchase price — or cost price if you are building — must not exceed the limit established by CMHC for the area in which the unit is located. Your local CMHC office will provide details concerning price limits.

If you believe you are eligible — either through a new home purchase you have already made or one you plan to make — visit, write or phone your nearest Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation office for an application form.

ROLLING STONE

Sweet and Sexy

By STEPHEN HOLDEN

Linda Ronstadt had her first hit, "Different Drum," in 1967, singing with a group called The Stone Poneys. She didn't have one again until "Long Long Time," in 1970. Until recently, in fact, Linda Ronstadt had to work very, very hard to earn a good living. Though long acknowledged to be one of the best female vocalists in pop, she didn't write (like Carole King, Joni Mitchell, etc) and therefore didn't collect writer's royalties. Nor was her recording career an adjunct to another area of show business (like Barbra Streisand, Liza Minnelli, etc.). Last year, with the release of Ronstadt's debut album on Asylum, Don't Cry Now, the years of working toward mass recognition began to pay off. Heart Like a Wheel, which concludes her prior commitment to Capitol, should cinch her career.

After years of touring, Linda Ronstadt has developed into the rare artist who comes off even better live than on record. Last February, when she opened for Jackson Browne at Carnegie Hall, I was awed by her stage demeanor. This pert, pretty young woman bounced onto the stage with the exuberance of a cheerleader and immediately took command of both her band and the audience, delivering a set that was as uplifting for the genuine enjoyment she communicated as for the professionalism of the music, a satisfying crossblend of pop and country. One of the reasons Heart Like a Wheel is so impressive, surpassing even the excellent Don't Cry Now, is its expansion of repertoire beyond country and folk-rock. It also joins Ronstadt to her ideal producer, Peter Asher, who with Andrew Gold has provided 10 well-chosen songs with full distinctive sound settings, notable for the variety and imagination of their instrumentation.

The opening cut, Clint Ballard Jr.'s "You're No Good," displays Ronstadt's enormous potential as a white blues singer. Backed by Clydie King and Shirley Matthews, Ronstadt lets go with a soulful wail that comes as an exciting surprise.

RONSTADT
. . . honey soprano

While the remainer of the album consists of good material by Paul Anka, Lowell George, Phil Everly and James Taylor, among others, all of it is overshadowed by the title song, written by Anna McGarrigle, whose magnificent "Cool River" was recently recorded by Maria Muldaur. A folk hymn, whose tune and lyrics are incredibly eloquent in their implicity, "Heart Like a Wheel" is a masterpiece of writing and arrangement, set by David Campbell as a formal chamber piece with piano, double bass, cello, viola and fiddle counterpointing dual vocals by Ronstadt and Maria Muldaur. The long lyric, which distills the themes of the album — "And it's only love, and it's only love That can wreck a human being and turn him inside out" — also underscores the essence of Ronstadt's vocal persona. No pop singer so completely embodies the mythical Western girl-woman, hurt yet strong, and entirely feminine in the traditional sense. There is a throbbing edge to Ronstadt's honey-colored soprano that no other singer quite possesses — the edge between vulnerability and willfullness that I find totally, irresistibly sexy.

A 'Big Guy' Standing in Our Way.

When a child grows up under the shadow of an older, bigger and more aggressive sibling, sooner or later there comes a point at which he must escape from that shadow.

Either he develops a distinctive and independent personality of his own or risks being doomed to play second fiddle for all time.

Victoria's situation in relation to Canada's third largest city is a perfect illustration of the point. But there is still a major hurdle. How does one make one's muscle known to others when the big guy is standing in the way?

Performing arts professionals in Victoria are understandably becoming more and more irritated by the attitude of many mainlanders, and most of the rest of Canada, that Vancouver is the end and the beginning and has the monopoly on all the goodies of the B.C. arts world.

Publications that devote columns to the arts never appear to make an individual contact in Victoria but lump us in with Vancouver and whoever acts as representative there, if he looks our way at all, bestows on us nothing more than a superficial over-the-shoulder glance.

As an example of the sort of bland ignorance that is perpetuated in national journals, let me tell you about a statement that appeared in the fall 1973 issue of Canada's glossy Performing Arts magazine.

"The first conservatory of music in British Columbia offering instruction in all instruments and voice, has commenced operation with the current fall term."

It then went on to identify the "first conservatory" as Westminster campus of Douglas College! At the time our Victoria Conservatory had been offering instruction in all instruments and voice for the better part of eight years.

This week yet another unjustified claim by Vancouver has been brought to my attention.

Announcing auditions to be held for the Playhouse Acting School, the Playhouse Theatre Centre of B.C. claimed the school to be the only one of its kind in Canada directly attached to a professional company.

Not so, says Camosun College PR lady Barbara McLauchlin indignantly.

Bastion Theatre School, which has been operating for a decade in Viktoria, is now linked with the Camosun College Professional Actor Training Program, and is entering its second year as the first professional training school for actors in Canada affiliated directly with a professional theatre.

"Camosun's senior students have been acting on the professional stage in Bastion Theatre mainstage productions and other professional communityi performances," says Barbarj.

Camosun College-Bastion Theatre will also be holding auditions (in April) for admission to the 1975-76 sessions.

But Barbara is not interested in mounting an advertising campaign based on a competition for students — only in setting the record straight.

Vancouver, it is safe to say however, is the opera centre of the Canadian Pacific rim. A couple of decades of handsomely mounted productions have peopled the Queen Elizabeth stage with Canadian singers who now bear international reputations, as well as Metropolitan stars.

Joan Sutherland premiered two roles — Norma and Lucrezia — on the Queen E. stage.

With all this exposure and opportunity one might suppose that the soil and climate would be rich for the proliferation of fine vocal talent.

But the Metropolitan Opera district auditions held in Vancouver last Sunday — for which I was one of a panel of three judges — did not uncover much of exceptional merit.

Among the seven entrants there were some good voices but neither in vocal quality nor training was there positive evidence of operatic potential.

Barry Rector, in his late twenties, chosen to go to Seattle this Sunday for the Northwest Regional audition, possesses a robust tenor, a strong dramatic sense, imagination and experience, but there are still serious flaws in the production of his voice.

At least two of the others were or had been singing in the wrong range: a girl entered as a mezzo but in her second aria (judges' choice) proved to be an infinitely more effective soprano; and a young baritone, under the influence of a new teacher, was exploring the tenor range, but the productionn was still insecure.

A static on-stage presence that prevented communication was noted with all but two of the contestants.

Later, in a private meeting with the seven singers and three adjudicators — the other two were David Spencer of Vancouver and Father John Foster of Seattle — it was clear that the singers were unsure of themselves, groping for clues and more anxious for advice than they were to win the audition.

The discussion also emphasized that there are many ways to approach the development of the human voice. Some are downright bad, a very few are good and even of the good, no one procedure uniformly suits all students.

Adventure Film On High Sierras

Spectacular scenery and fascinating information on the geology and natural history of the area is encompassed in High Sierra, the World Adventure Tours film coming to McPherson Playhouse Monday.

Open Space Ethnic Dance Show Sunday

An afternoon of ethnic and Scottish country dance will provide live entertainment Sunday afternoon at Open Space.

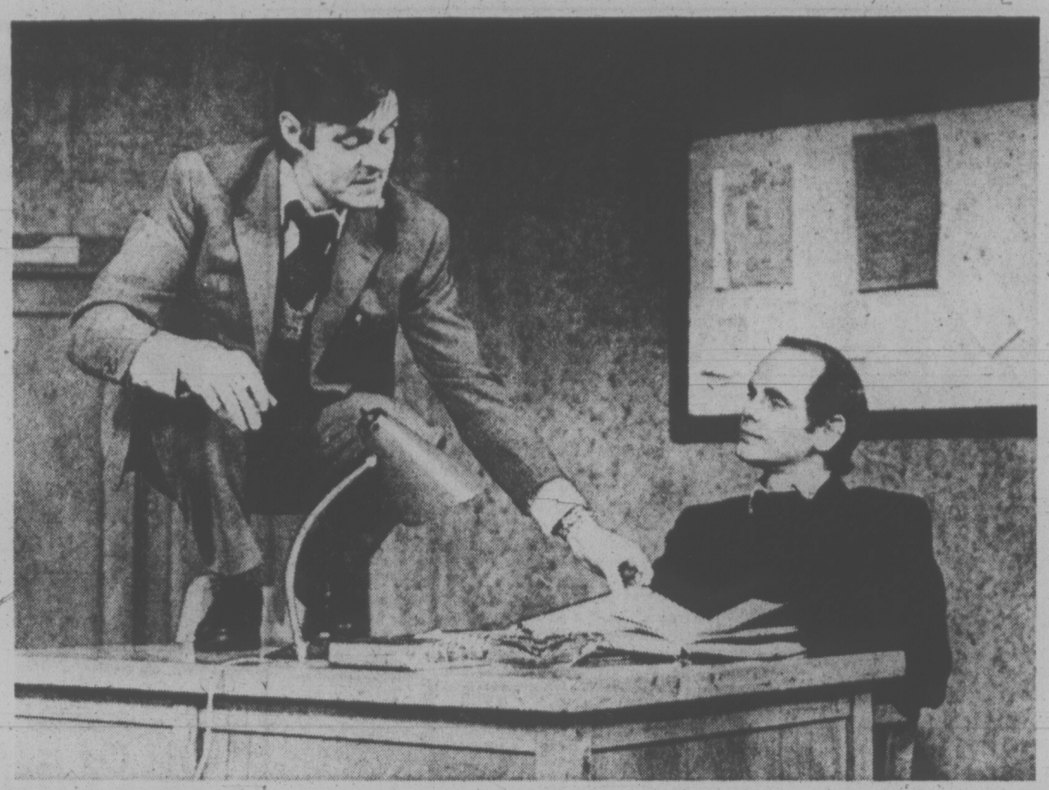
The Royal Scottish Dance Society of Victoria with the bagpipes of Colin Magee and songs of Rab Lang, will be featured performers. They will be assisted by Victoria International Folk Dancers performing dances from other parts of the world.

The Scottish dancers' program will include among others, the Solway Reel, Highland Fling, Hebridean Weaving Lilt and The Shepherd's Crook.

Young dancers from the society's children's classes will also be performing some well known steps. The show starts at 2 p.m.

Evening classes for instruction in Scottish country dancing for beginners, juniors, intermediate and advanced dancers are now in progress at Sir James Douglas School auditorium.

Those interested can contact John Ghanam, 598-8583, or head instructor Gerry Dunn, 598-6547.



JEERING Butley (Gary Files) taunts his friend Joey (Larry Aubrey) in scene from the Bastion production.

Bastion's Butley Dulls Scathing Wit

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

The play with which Bastion Theatre begins the 1975 half of its current season is bitter, witty, scathing, a little sad, a little sick.

If you have read the script beforehand you know that Butley is clever, well constructed, shrewd and crackling with knife-edged humor.

You are fortunate in fact if you have read the script because much of Simon Gray's intent blurred in the Bastion production directed by Edwin Stephenson, which opened Friday at McPherson Playhouse.

Butley — first name Ben — is a lecturer in English in a college of London University.

Sharing his office and an intimate friendship is his former star pupil, now a teacher, Joey Keyston. The two acts of the play are concerned with a day on which Butley faces "two divorces" that will terminate his marriage and his friendship.

There is no question in my mind that the cast was more than adequate to have brought this play off successfully.

The challenging title role which demands of the actor that he be on stage virtually throughout and reach actually or by implication many levels of thought and emotion, is taken by Toronto's Gary Files.

This is a smooth, assured performance, well timed, intelligent, technically proficient and done with feeling as well as mockery.

The supporting players — Patricia Carroll Brown, Larry Aubrey, Glynis Leyshon, and bit players Norman Browning and Gil Osborne are all efficient and possess the potential to create a really fine production.

Two factors waterdown this potential and made the first part of the play dull and static — tempo and intensity.

The over-all tempo is so draggy that it blunts Files' ability to register effectively his excellent sense of pace and rhythm.

Stephenson has followed the script faithfully in directing and reveals a sensitivity toward the play's overtones.

But he must also bear responsibility for the fact that the wit and repartee does not crackle; that the counterpoint of text and sub-text is unclear; that the piece is in fact, seriously underplayed to a degree that also frequently affects audibility.

Butley continues at the McPherson (where the audience is kept reasonably warm with a battery of electric heaters) tonight and Sunday through Feb. 8 with the exception of Monday.

A Chance for Artists

If, in six months or a year, artists are still feeling frustrated, isolated, ignored and in the dark, they will only have themselves to blame.

It will be because they have failed to file biographical data with the B.C. government's new Arts Information Service.

Through this service the government is hoping to provide information and establish communication throughout the province for the thousands of people now actively involved with arts and crafts.

The service is working under the Provincial Secretary's office.

Means by which information will be assembled, catalogued and made available will be an arts directory and artists' register, copies of which will be available to every interested person.

By this means, says Anderson in a circular sent out to all organizations and many individuals throughout B.C., "we'll be able to tell you where the galleries and theatres are, their size and type of audience, who to contact if you're into pottery and want to communicate with other potters ... and more. Lots more."

Copies of the circular outlining the information wanted are available from the Arts Information Service Project Office at 302 Cordage Building, 12 Water Street, Vancouver, V6B 1A4.

Hats Off to Albee!

By CLIVE BARNES

NEW YORK — Hats off and up in the air! A major dramatic event. Edward Albee's play Seascape, which opened at the Shubert Theatre, is fundamentally a play about life and resolution. It is that currently rare thing, a comedy rather than a farce, and it is a curiously compelling exploration into the basic tenets of life.

It is asking in a lighthearted but heavy-minded fashion whether life is worth living. It decides that there is no alternative.

As Albee has matured as a playwright his work has become leaner, sparer and simpler. He depends on strong theatrical strokes to attract the attention of the audience, but the tone of the writing is always thoughtful, even careful, even philosophic. As with any major artist he has his own distinct profile — an Albee play is recognizably an Albee play — but if he could usefully be linked with any of his contemporaries, they would be Samuel Beckett and Harold Pinter.

The story is simplicity itself. A middle-aged couple, with children departed and obviously of independent means, find themselves on a beach. They discuss, in the desultory fashion of old and friendly lovers, love, marriage and life. She paints, he snoozes. What has it all added up to? Eventually they are met by another middleaged couple. The second couple happens to be lizards.

The lizards are deep-sea creatures at a very advanced stage of evolution who have decided to come up into the air. It is very nearly a foolish trick on the playwright's part. After all, anthropomorphic monsters from the nether depths, who wear scales but speak English in a stilted accent, should by all the rules of the game be childish. But plays have a happy way of not having rules.

What Albee has given us here is a play of great density, with many interesting emotional and intellectual reverberations. The trigger of the play's action is obvious enough — it is the old visitor from mars examining human institutions and practices and comparing them with his own to the amusement and the amazement of the audience.

But the resonances go much deeper than could be offered by science fiction pop-guns. Albee is suggesting that one of the purposes of an individual human existence is quite simple evolution — that we all play a part in this oddly questionable historic process. So that the purpose of life is life itself — it is a self-fulfilling destiny. We have to come out of the water and get onto the beach, we have to live and we have to die, simply because life is about life.

The tone of the beginning of the play irresistibly recalls — surely intentionally — Beckett's Happy Days. There is the same discursive familiarity, the same apparent aimlessness, which is betrayed only by the occasional pellet of truth or the compellingly apt joke. With the arrival of the sea-creatures there is a sudden danger of triteness. There is a fear that after all we are just going to be told that "everyone is the same under the skin — black, white, yellow or lizard." But the danger passes as Albee, with that spare laconic language of his, probes deeper and deeper into the subterreanean seascape of our pasts, present, and futures.

This is the first play that Albee has directed and he has done so with self-evident skill and ease. The directorial difficulty is obvious enough — to make the sea-creatures both strange enough to cast contrasting light upon our own humanity, credible enough to speak English, and also to draw the humor out of the similarity between the two couples with subtlety rather than obviousness. This he achieves by virtually choreographing the sea-creatures (he is much helped by the splendid costumes of Fred Voelpel) and giving them a special diction rather than a special language or even a special accent. It works well, as does the handsome sand-duned set by James Tilton.

The actors have been carefully picked, coached and presented. Deborah Kerr (after far too long away from Broadway) starts beautifully and diffidently as a no-nonsense English matron, and then slowly slips off her pretenses and becomes a very warm woman.

PETER MURRAY - EDITOR

Making Sense Of the Movies

By PAT BARCLAY

I can't recall when it was, exactly, that we first heard the news, but now of course it seems as if we'd known all along. Marshall Delaney was Robert Fulford! As explanations go, this one was just right — how else could so original and acute a national critic have remained so obscure?

Marshall Delaney was born, Fulford is now free to tell us, out of necessity in 1965: "At the time I was writing a daily column for the (Toronto) Star, on books and related subjects, and (managing editor Ralph) Allen had noticed that I was also writing a column on movies for Saturday Night." Because the Star felt it had bought prior rights to the Fulford "image," Fulford was given the choice of either dropping his movie column or writing it under another name.

The result was a remarkable series of film reviews which were distinguished by their maturity, range and coherence. In a world where half the population seems to have been born to create chaos, and the other half to make some sort of order out of it, Marshall Delaney came down firmly on the side of order.

"Emblem" and "Icon" were two of his favorite words and he applied them often, seeking out patterns of social behavior and symbols of mass culture in all kinds of movies, good, bad or indifferent. An identifying characteristic of the born critic is his vacuum cleaner approach to the field of his special interest; to him no material, no matter how trivial it may appear to others, is ever totally irrelevant.

Thus we never knew what Delaney would turn to next, whether his subject would be "lowbrow, machined entertainment" (The Wild Angels), "the sense of a new culture discovered" (The Harder They Come), or his very first visit to a drive-in theatre ("One sensed that the quality of the popcorn, say, was more important than the quality of the film).

FULFORD (Alias DELANEY)
. . . an order man

He could irritate, as in his 1969 review of Midnight Cowboy, which he termed "appalling," and which, I suspect, was influenced by that film's sleazy portrait of what used to be one of Fulford's favorite cities. He could entertain, as in his witty prologue to a review of The Neptune Factor: "It is only when you encounter head-on a movie like The Neptune Factor that you begin to appreciate the virtues of, say, Arthur Hailey . . . Hailey has the Popular Touch, which is to say that he tells us things we've heard before but want to hear again . . . you sense behind it all a certain effort and at least a little ingenuity, there is something there, however dumb and flat. The Neptune Factor, on the other hand, reminds you that there is a crucial difference between the Popular Touch and No Touch at all."

But most especially he could read the signs. Probably the best example of this is his review of The Scalphunters, on Page 113 of Marshall Delaney at the Movies, which explains how the image of the Negro in the U.S has changed — The Scalphunters has told him so.

It is possible, of course, that Delaney could be misreading the signs, like a fortune teller holding his customer's teacup upside down. In a column about modern movie heroes, for example (Page 143), he discusses various screen images (Elliot Gould, Jack Nicholson, etc.) as if they represent the public's own wish-fulfillment, not studio type-casting. Well, maybe he's right at that. After re-reading his column on Guess Who's Coming to Dinner, which impresses me as much now as it did in 1968, I'm willing to give him the benefit of the doubt.

Delaney's book is divided into three sections. The first, which deals with Canadian films and filmakers, is valuable for the information it contains about who's who and about early films of this period which many of us may have missed. The second and best section analyses Hollywood films, many of them popular successes, and explores the secrets of their appeal. A final section interprets films from the rest of the world and includes a review of Donald Richie's The Films of Akira Kurosawa which is exceptional.

To judge by Marshall Delaney at the Movies, the chief difference between European and American films lies in their separate approaches to reality. The Europeans, it seems, are fond of employing fantasy to expose reality. The Americans on the other hand, use fantasy to disguise reality. (Canadian films, apparently, are still working on facing reality pointblank. Well, somebody has to.)

Like most generalizations, this one has a few holes in it, but it's an interesting one for continuing contemplation. Which reminds me, I began by referring to Marshall Delaney in the past tense. Now that Saturday Night has been resuscitated once again, hopefully for another 87 years to come, will Marshall Delaney return? As a persistent filmgoer, I fervently hope so. Even if, this time around, he decides to disguise himself as Robert Fulford.

A Fond Tribute To Three Editors

By GEORGE OAKE

It is impossible for me to review The Journal Men without bias as I had the good fortune to be a Journal "Boy" for two years and remember well "the narrow corridor and four offices," as well as the editor's stronghold with its "old-fashioned leaded windows and square beam ceiling" on the northwest corner of the sixth floor at 237 Queens Street, Ottawa.

My time came long after the three Journal men described in this book had departed, but their integrity and influence were as tangible as their portraits which hung in the hall outside the editorial offices.

THE JOURNAL MEN, by I. Norman Smith. McClelland and Stewart. $7.95.

Author I. Norman Smith, who followed these men to the Journal editor's chair and carried on their best traditions, takes us from 1891 when P. D. Ross bought the Journal for $4,000 to the end of Grattan O'Leary's reign when the paper was Canada's most quoted newspaper.

As Smith notes in the introduction, the book is not a Journal history, "but a look at the three men who made it . . ." and, it could be added, an insight into the national psyche emerging from its colonial days and developing into a nation, as interpreted by three editors of a large daily newspaper.

Interestingly enough, none of the three, on what was once thought of as Canada's most staunchly Tory newspaper, were rigid ideologues espousing the Conservative cause. First and foremost they were good newspapermen with a sense of piety towards their trade.

After a trip to England and Scotland in 1909, Ross, the first of the triumverate, came home shocked and appalled by the conditions of the poor there.

"From then on the editorial page of The Journal took on a more zealous concern in improving the lot of the Canadian workingman and frequently crusaded for new social policies that were more effective for coming from a nominally Conservative editor and paper," Smith writes.

Nor was Ross one to muck about with the editorials of his writers. When a case on separate schools — a touchy subject in the Ottawa Valley of those days — came before the privy council, Catholic O'Leary asked Protestant Ross how it should be handled.

"O'Leary, you say what you think is sensible," said Ross, in his only editorial direction.

"You see P. D. was a Conservative when the election drums rolled, but between elections he wasn't really. He was a pretty independent-minded man, and your father was too," said O'Leary, referring to E. Norman Smith who followed Ross.

If Ross was the "powerful writer," E. Norman Smith was the "superb editor," in O'Leary's view. His son, the author of this book, is naturally more restrained in assessing his father's contribution to the paper. Reading between the lines the elder Smith appears to have been more deeply involved in the newspaper than his predecessor, ". . . in touch with the office every night and they had orders to call him if anything broke."

"I want the Journal to enter homes with grace, as a guest," he told his editors.

And then came Grattan O'Leary, who had worked alongside Ross and Smith in the process of becoming Canada's most famous newspaperman.

"I have read the Speech from the Throne over and over again, from its first page of platitudinous inconsequences to the last page where it calls for the protection of divine providence — and that was about the only hopeful thing in the whole document."

O'Leary in full flight. His career is now being chronicled in the Senate where his speeches can still wake up the somnolent Red Chamber and make national headlines.

ROSS
. . . first owner

But here we see a different O'Leary, the gentle but tough-minded editor. Handing back an editorial to the author, he said, "Norman, this is too long and too confused, and it mixes frivolity and seriousness in a way that won't do. But what really worries me about it is that you know it has these faults, but didn't work them out of it. That's all I'm going to say."

Each of these men brought different strengths to the editor's chair. Yet in these sympathetic portraits we can perceive a continuity, a certain stubborn religiosity towards their craft that is needed now, God knows, more than ever before.

O'Leary recalls a man who wished to purchase the Journal before it joined the FP chain.

"We had one man . . . who came in and put a cheque book on the table and said, fill it out. We wouldn't sell it. We didn't think he was a fit and proper person to run a paper like the Journal."

If there is a criticism of this book it is that Smith does not inject enough of himself in these pages. He admits he let the Journal men tell most of the story through their own words, and that's how in his own modesty he thought it should be. But he worked for and with all three and I for one would have liked to see more of his interpretations and observations.

Still, it remains a fascinating chronicle on the growth of a newspaper and the forging of traditions and integrity which have spread across the country in the wake of three Journal men.

The Memories Of an Ex-Con

By LEONARD RUSSO

One of the more interesting young authors to appear on the Canadian writing circuit is Don Bailey, who robbed a bank at age 23, served five years in prison, and more recently has been turning out books (mostly poetry) at the rate of roughly one a year from his home in southern Ontario. In The Belly of the Whale, is his first full-length novel, and, if the accompanying publicity can be trusted, it is largely autobiographical.

IN THE BELLY OF THE WHALE, by Don Bailey. Oberon. $6.95. Paperback $3.50.

The story revolves around five days in the life of Joseph Cross just after his release from federal prison. During this time, he rejoins his wife and two daughters, celebrates by getting drunk, contacts his former employer, applies for welfare, muses interminably about the past, and visits a parole officer who advises that "to get back into the swing of things" is what matters.

For Cross, however, no advice could be further from the truth. Toward the end of the novel, confused and listless as ever, he abandons his family to sort out his life, and the reader is led to believe) start from the ground up elsewhere.

Truthfully, there is not much of a story here, but more a collection of sensitive sketches shaped into a novel. Flashbacks dominate the book, and though many are well-written, their relevance to the narrative is often left up to the reader. The book seesaws from present to past better than it arrives at any striking realization or conclusion.

These shortcomings aside, Bailey has an obvious knack with language. His style is colloquial without being mannered, though occasionally he turns literary (a fault of almost all young writers). His description of how Cross first meets his wife is one of the small gems of the novel: "I met her at a party when I was sixteen. I had the usual pimples, greasy duck-tail, white shirt with the collar turned up, draped strides and motorcycle boots with chains on them. I bleached my hair blonde and thought of myself as pretty hot stuff, or cool. I can't remember what it was best to be in those days. It was halloween, which was appropriate for the stage I was going through."

In addition, Bailey has a gift for coming up with the right set of words to describe people, as, for example, when he depicts a social worker as "smiling, sunny-eyed, (and) moist-handed."

Nevertheless, the novel is disappointing on the whole. Somewhere inside Don Bailey is the stuff of first-rate writing, but whether it is a formally structured novel or a simple spontaneous memoir is a moot point. Whatever, in this book he has come up with less than he can deliver.

Pioneers Of B.C. Remember

By TORCHY ANDERSON

How much British Columbia history — personal history, that is — begins with a tug-of-war between the singing teakettle and the bubbling coffee pot? The question arises when one reads a book like this — a collection of backward views by men and women who have achieved what some unknown clown has classed as "senior citizenship."

As they sit in their comfortable quarters some of these old-timers have put down their experiences in arriving in backwoods settlements of the interior or the hard rocks and high timber of the coast. Some turned poet; many started little weeklies or became contributors to those mainstays of interchange of rural news and ideas.

MAKING HISTORY: An Anthology of British Columbia. Edited and published by Millicent Lindp, Victoria. $10.

Most of the contributors to this anthology came from Britain. Hence the battle of the tea kettle and the coffee pot. When the British family arrived in the backwoods stopping place, or the log shack made ready by an "advance party," the first thing they longed for was a cup of tea. What they found most often was the aroma of coffee. The cup of tea that was eventually produced was the nectar of home.

Ghosts stalk through these reminiscences: The story of Anyox, the coastal community that became a large town and then died the death that came to many smaller places when the ore ran out.

This is not a book for the younger generation. Many of them do not consider British Columbia has a history reaching further back than the last Grey Cup saturnalia. Nor does it add many factural details. But it does give one a feeling and understanding of the people who were shocked on arrival but downed their cup of tea and left the coffee pot at the ready on the back of the kitchen range.

The book is artistically produced, contains interesting old photographs and offers book-end maps.

A Chaplin Album

By DAVID DUNSMUIR

At the age of 85, Charlie Chaplin shows no sign of permanently shuffling off down The Open Road, with the added swagger of a newly acquired knighthood.

His myth in pictures has been larger than life for 60 years. Like the road, it goes on. Plans for a new film were announced only last month.

Chaplin, whom James Agee described as "the first man to give the silent language a soul," avoids soulfulness in this collection of snapshots, faded clippings and studio stills.

MY LIFE IN PICTURES, by Charles Chaplin. Clarke, Irwin. $21.95.

The family album bulges with nostalgia: all of Chaplin's public faces, surrounded by those of the people encountered en route from a Lambeth workhouse to a manor in Switzerland. A jug-eared understudy can be recognized as Stan Laurel. From a Hollywood party of the '20s, we spot a gangling dude in a bandana and fright wig — Gary Cooper, a young man on his way up, meeting the master.

For worshippers, the book reproduces unfamiliar full-color icons: posters and trade giveaways from many of the countries where The Tramp took hold.

Screen historians will find a rich visual archive and a few valuable facts, such as the production details of every Chaplin film. (The list reaches its 35th title by the end of 1914 just a year after Mack Sennett plucked "Archibald the Inebriate" out of a touring music-hall troupe.)

Sources of most of the pleasures are, appropriately enough, non-verbal.

The first-person commentary keeps Chaplin himself at a distance — except, perhaps, in understandable but revealing phrases about his own "technical virtuosity." His best-selling autobiography told us everything about his life that he was prepared to reveal; this mosaic of his life's work goes beyond words.

A Lady Doctor On the Frontier

By GLENNIS ZILM

Elizabeth Scott Matheson was one of Canada's remarkable women — a frontier doctor and missionary-teacher in the primitive and remote areas of northern territory of what later became Saskatchewan.

The wife of a dedicated Anglican missionary who ran an Indian school at Onion Lake, she braved the social customs of her time to leave her husband and family and return to medical school. Then she had to overcome the prejudices of the medical profession against a woman in practice.

THE DOCTOR RODE SIDE-SADDLE, by Ruth Matheson Buck. McClelland and Stewart. $8.95.

She was born the year before Confederation and died in 1958, at age 92, after a life marked by many unusual actions for a woman of her time. Her story now is told in a new hardcover book, The Doctor Rode Side-Saddle, written by one of her daughters.

The story also is a love story, for her life was influenced greatly by John Grace Matheson, whom she met when she was 19 and he was 37. He had led a rather wild life, moving the ox and cart brigades "out to the Saskatchewan," and as a trader, buffalo-hunter, building contractor.

Their six-year courtship was mostly long-distance, for she had gone to India as a missionary teacher, but she finally followed him to BC and they were married in New Westminster.

By then he had felt the call of the Church and the young couple moved to Onion Lake to take over the Anglican mission school.

The book describes the life of the Mathesons at Onion Lake from 1891 to 1916, during which time Elizabeth completed her medical degree and also bore nine children.

Although the book focuses mainly on Elizabeth, it is not as grossly emphatic as the title and jacket blurbs reflect. (One suspects the publishers and editors thought that books about women might be big on the market now.) The book obviously was planned originally as a story about both parents; John Grace certainly was as remarkable as Elizabeth.

Elizabeth, in particular, fails to come to life in these pages; the stories have a curiously "handed-down" style and the gloss and lustre of the woman in the photographs is not matched by words. Mrs. Buck has striven too much for objectivity in her mother's story.

The author is a former teacher and historian who has written numerous articles for various publications and has edited a collection of Indian stories from Onion Lake into a novel, Voices of the Plain Cree.

Her new book comes alive mostly in the descriptions of life in the mission, of the facts of life for early women, and in the overall picture of conditions of early prairie life.

Hitting at Pillows

By DOUGAL FRASER

It seems a habit of present-day novelists to attempt a conscious vagueness in writing, a willing obtuseness, a maundering lethargic introspection. The fact that this approach may be of no interest to anyone save the novelist's closest friends is insufficient a penalty to pay. This collection almost avoids the style.

THE EBONY TOWER, by John Fowles. Little, Brown. $8.95.

The first story gives this book of short stories its title. A young mod artist-critic interviews an old painter, an exile from modern trends in art. Living in lordly seclusion in France, the old man has a menage of housekeeper, gardener and two young art students, exiles themselves from formalized art instruction. Too late, the young man realizes that it is himself who has been cut off, voluntarily, from life. Existence alone is not enough to justify living.

In "Eliduc", Fowles transliterates an old French tale of courtly love into a very pleasing piece. When he ceases to try to be communicative and simply communicates he is a very readable author.

"Koko" is about class differences. We have been inundated by expressions about the generation gap but in this story Fowles sees it as a cry for help over the inability to communicate of the older and younger generations. It is a failure on both sides, making an abyss out of what should be merely a ripple.

"The Enigma" is a fascinating story where, in a mysterious disappearance, the central character of the story goes missing — a mystery without a solution. The ending is, in fact, a non-ending, and it is a neat trick well done.

The last story is "The Cloud", and, like a cloud, it is vaporous and enigmatic. A conflict of personalities in a foreign country where the inability of one to communicate with the others is so isolating and debilitating an experience that, again, the character goes missing, like a princess in a fairy tale.

To assess the book is a nebulous task, like hitting a pillow. Although the writing is often a stream of consciousness deadening the language, there are sparkling bon-mots, turns of phrase that illumine the text and echoes of other authors that send ripples of memory through the mind. It is a fine book for the fiction reader, for, be assured, the imagination of The Collector's creator is still vibrant, and the merits outclass the errors.

QUICK, WATSON, THE BOOK

THE SEVEN-PER-CENT SOLUTION, by Nicholas Meyer. Clarke, Irwin. $8.35.

THE PROBLEM

A new book, purportedly drawn from a hitherto neglected typescript by John H. Watson, M.D., puts forward a startling thesis concerning a shadowy period in the life of Sherlock Holmes. Statistical analysis of its style (aided by a monograph on this technique by the great detective himself) leads to the inescapable conclusion that the work is spurious. Its ingenuity, however, is a highly suspicious circumstance.

What motives lie behind this masterstroke? Why should SOMEONE apparently seek to persuade us AT THIS TIME that Holmes visited Sigmund Freud in Vienna in 1891, and solved a baffling case in tandem with the noted psychoanalyst while undergoing treatment for his addiction to cocaine?

THE SOLUTION

Revelations concerning Holmes cannot be the true goal, as scholarly research now indicates that he spent those "lost months" in the American Midwest as a private tutor to Harry Houdini.

Motives are adumbrated elsewhere, in the ASSUMPTIONS of the plot. Moriarty is represented as a harmless schoolmaster, unjustly branded as a criminal by the detective's tortured mind. The implications of this absurdity are sinister in the extreme. The Napoleon of crime still lives — through his gang of devils, who undoubtedly strive to gull the public into a false sense of security before they wreak further devastation on the world. Alert your local constabulary — and hurry! The course of history may depend on your actions!

Salary Hike Defended: 'I'm Worth More'—MP

Pay raise plans for MPs were defended by two government backbenchers speaking Friday to UVic student Liberal supporters.

"I'll tell you why I need a raise," said Iona Campagnola (Skeena). "I'm worth more."

Simma Holt (Vancouver-Kingsway) a former journalist whose campaign slogan in the last election advised voters that "Ottawa needs a jolt from Holt", said she was "tired" and not "too subtle" on the subject of MP salary increases.

She chastised the provincial government for unfounded criticism of salary increases, saying the NDP government doubled MLAs salaries (from $12,000 to $24,000) by having sessional indemnities and slating two sessions annually.

"They also have $8,000 expenses tax free and they just have to come across the water to get to the legislature. I hear it's free by plane," said Holt.

For federal MPs, however, she said "it isn't a case of wanting; it's a case of needing," caused by the distance between B.C. and Ottawa.

She said she relies heavily on a "marvellous bank manager" to make do on the current salary of $18,000 plus $6,000 for expenses."

"I haven't the money to pay a taxi from the (Ottawa) airport," she said.

"Even the NDPers wives are going to the other wives saying 'please fight to get it'."

Campagnolo said she was dipping into savings to come out even.

Both MPs received publicity recently for refusing to wear "Why Not! buttons", promoting International Women's Year on the grounds that the message is open to misinterpretation.

Questioned about it at UVic however, Holt said "ive la difference."

BEFORE THE JUDGE

Second convictions for possession of marijuana proved a costly experience in provincial court for one man and a jail sentence for another.

Patrick Bruce Radford, 27, of 841 Esquimalt, was sentenced to 20 days in prison after he pleaded guilty to possession of a baggie of marijuana when stopped by police in the 500-block Pandora Wednesday.

Crown counsel alleged a prior record including a conviction for possession of a narcotic in Victoria last August for which he was placed on one year's probation.

Martin Dieter Burkart, 21, of 210 Dundas, was fined $200 for possession of one joint of marijuana police found on him during a search of his car in the Colony Inn parking lot Tuesday night.

Burkart, who pleaded guilty, admitted a prior conviction for possession of marijuana last Nov. 29.

The normal penalty for first offenders is $75.

PSAC Forum Set

The public has been invited to a meeting of the Public Service Alliance of Canada at which the current pay dispute involving the trades and labor group will be discussed.

The meeting, at 1 p.m. Sunday in the Esquimalt Recreation Centre, 527 Fraser St., is scheduled to include national PSAC negotiator for Victoria area members on the state of conciliation proceedings in Ottawa. Jack Pinkerton, negotiator for Victoria, will address the meeeing.

Metchosin Hits 'Politics'

Metchosin isn't against experts getting together in an attempt to handle community problems, it's "just that to us politics has been brought into it."

Jack Waterman, president of the Metchosin Ratepayers AsidenItNP Association, said today there has been a misunderstanding over what the ratepayers are concerned about when he spoke out against a plan to involve Metchosin in what he considered a Pacific Centre planned project.

He said the ratepayers have gone on record opposing resource board involvement. It was indicated earlier this week that if a resource board is formed, the team concept could come under it.

"We are not against the team concept operating in our area. I think it's great that the professionals get together and discuss ways in which they can help the community.

"The only thing we are against is that Gregory (Dr. Charles) got involved because we feel he's bringing politics into this by using the team concept as a stepping stone to a resource board."

The issue flared this week with both Metchosin and the Albert Head Ratepayers demanding that Gregory, who operates the Pacific Centre for Human Development, "stop meddling" in Metchosin and Albert Head and that they wanted no part of a plan he has promoted.

Waterman said he talked to the Colwood RCMP, who are part of the team project, and he is now convinced that there isn't anything political about the concept.

A public meeting will be held Monday, Feb. 10 at 8 p.m. at the Metchosin Community Hall when the RCMP and others will explain the project to the community.

Regional board representative Ken Rainey will chair the meeting.

Waterman said it is unfortuate that the team idea has become a political issue.

"The team idea is working well and we welcome their work but it's unfortunate that Gregory is involved in this. We want him to pull in his horns," said Waterman.

The team plan is that the professionals (RCMP, pulbic health nurses, probation officers, department of human resources people and others) get together at least once a month and discuss mutual problems.

Tax Crackdown Hit

Simma Holf, liberal MP for Vancouver-Kingsway, Friday attacked the federal government proposal to end the tax exemptions which allowed Time and Readers' Digest to compete with Canadian periodicals.

The former newspaper reporter slammed the policy "because it means our young Canadian writers will not get the chance now to work for Time or Readers' Digest."

Speaking to University of Victoria student Liberals, she complained of the lack of Canadian content in periodicals saying: "Newsweek doesn't have anything on Canada and for that matter neither does Maclean's have much on B.C. Time has a whole section."

Holt predicted the federal government action — which means Canadian advertisers can no longer deduct the cost of advertising in the two U.S. publications for income tax purposes — will "just benefit the newspaper monopolies.

"The three newspaper chains, FP, Southam and Thompson will get all the ads."

Readers' Digest recently ran an article written by Holt on the Vancouver businessman Ben Wosk.

ATTENTION PARENTS

In Greater Victoria School District
(No. 61)

There is a possibility that our schools may become involved in a strike-lockout of some staff. The Greater Victoria School Board makes this announcement so you may be prepared.

If there is a strike-lockout, remember these points:

1. All schools will be open for approximately one hour each morning. They will open at the regular time. Children will receive homework assignments, then be sent home.

2. Do not send food to school with your children.

3. All special activities—noon-hour, after-school and evening—will not be held in schools until after the strike-lockout.

The School Board will try to give parents advance warning of any strike-lockout, but cannot guarantee it. Read your newspaper or listen to the radio and TV news.

Teachers will remain on the job, but will not perform work normally done by non-teachers.

When not giving assignments or marking, teachers will attend professional training programs.

The short school day has been chosen as the best way of keeping our schools open if a strike-lockout occurs. It will conserve heating fuel and reduce litter.

Tanya Only Knows She's at the Top

By DEREK SIDENIUUS
Times Staff

You can bet your pea-pickin' heart the hottest little number in the world of country music is coming to Victoria this weekend.

But for Tanya Tucker, the 16-year-old bombshell singer it's just another stop in a never-ending circuit that she says has covered one million miles in the past year.

Hank Snow might have immortalized the song, I've been everywhere, man, I've been everywhere, but Tanya is living proof. Hank mentions 80 places in his phrenic wail; Tanya can reel off 800.

Trouble is she needs her father Bo Tucker to tell her where she's going next. He's her manager, mentor, adviser, and quite obviously map reader.

In a telephone interview from Vancouver, she wasn't quite sure about her current itinerary.

Yes, she appeared in Vancouver Friday at the Queen Elizabeth Theatre.

Yes, it was her first time in Canada, but no, she had been been to Canada before—the Prairies and Toronto where she'd done shows with the likes of Tommy Hunter and Ian Tyson.

And yes, she was coming to Victoria. But when? Sunday? Okay.

She was vague about the sequence of her 11-stop tour of western Canada and the United States . . . but, what the heck, let Bo work out the logistics, she'll handle the entertainment.

It's been that way ever since she was nine, a country and western prodigy of sorts playing the talent shows, service clubs and public meetings in Wilcox, Arizona.

She needed no prodding.

"I just wanted to sing."

Her father, a restless jack-of-all-trades who had worked as roughneck, miner and construction trader, recognized her potential.

The family moved to Nashville, Tennessee, bent on introducing Tanya to the big time country music agents. But, she said, everyone turned her down so the Tuckers drove back west and stopped at Las Vegas where at the age of 13 she got her first big break.

Billy Sherrill, a highly successful agent ironically fresh from Nashville, listened to her tapes, liked what he heard and signed the youngster to a recording contract.

Her first cut was the original version of Delta Dawn, an instant hit.

Since then her success has been mercurial. She now has eight records out including her latest, I Believe the South is Gonna Rise Again.

Her own rise to stardom has meant a strange life rolling like tumbleweed in the family's converted Greyhound bus from one concert to another.

Her entourage includes her father, her mother, Wanita, her brother, Don, 30, and her own six-piece band.

Her older sister and brother-in-law La Costa and Derrill Sorensen follow the bus in a van.

La Costa, 24, started belting out country tunes a couple of years ago and since has put out two records of her own.

She shares the billing on this tour with Tanya, as does a 13-year-old boy from Tennessee named Jeff Allen (no relation).

The Tanya "phenom" has brought wealth so much so in fact she has formed her own company, Tanya Incorporated with headquarters in Little Rock, Arkansas.

And her career has interrupted her formal education. She hasn't attended a school for two years.

"I just haven't had time," she said. "I'll take up where I left off later on."

Right now her ambition is to have a "number one show" . . . "A show," she added, "that people will enjoy".

She said she has no particular singing idol—though admires anyone who's become a success—and strives only to develop her own unique style.

"I do a little bit of everything . . . modern rock, pop, country and gospel . . . I like 'em all."

The killing pace set for her has meant little time to relax, but when she does, if there is snow nearby she goes skiing, if water, then waterskiing.

Her favorite pastime, however, is riding cutting horses, and perhaps it's not surprising considering most of her early childhood years were spent in small outback communities of Texas and Arizona.

16-Year-Old Bombshell Tanya Tucker

Has she missed anything in growing up?

"No, I don't think so . . . I feel I've been pretty lucky."

And what about the future—what does a 16-year-old star do with her life for an encore.

"Just kep on singing," she reiterated.

Bank of B.C. announces Cost-of-Living adjustment to its Inflation Fighter Savings Account.

In January, 1974, Bank of B.C. introduced its exclusive Pioneer Service Plan with Inflation Fighter Savings. We became the first Canadian bank to pay you interest every month on a high yield savings account. And we pledged to adjust the interest annually, based on the Consumer Price Index published by Statistics Canada. We have now adjusted the interest paid during 1974 by 12.4%.

What does this mean in dollars? Well, if you had a total of $100 interest paid to your Inflation Fighters Savings Account during 1974 you would receive an additional $12.40.

And that's not all. As a Pioneer Service Plan customer you are entitled to other benefits: safety deposit box at 50% the usual fee, free unlimited chequing, travellers cheques and money orders with no service charge, free personalized cheques, as well as other services.

The Pioneer Service Plan is exclusively for men and women 65 or older. Ask about it at any Branch of the Bank of B.C. It could mean extra interest earnings for you in 1975.

U.K. Gets Power To Nationalize

LONDON (Reuter) — The Labor government published legislation Friday giving it far-reaching powers to expand state ownership in industry and assist big companies when they get into financial difficulties.

The bill would create a national enterprise board with the avowed aim of making British industry more efficient and internationally competitive.

The bill will be debated in mid-February.

The Conservative opposition said that the bill would allow the government to nationalize any company in Britain.

A Conservative spokesman said the powers given the government under the bill might destroy the country's free-enterprise system.

The NEB is the brainchild of the controversial left-wing industry secretary, Tony Benn, who has been pushing for more state direction of industry. He has said private firms do not invest enough for the future.

One important provision of the new bill is for planning agreements between the government and key companies to ensure that the policies of these firms are in harmony with national needs and objectives.

The minister can, under certain circumstances, require manufacturing firms to give him information about their sales, output, exports and other details.

He can order information to be passed on to trade unions if he thinks it relevant for them.

The bill arms the minister with power to prohibit control over important manufacturing firms from passing to persons resident outside Britian where the transfer would be contrary to the national interest.

Plebiscites Ruled Out

B.C. School boards will now have the authority to establish community colleges without first seeking approval through local plebiscites.

Changes in regulations to the Public Schools Act were approved by cabinet this week to make the process of establishing colleges similar to the process used when other expenditures involving local sharing are approved.

The wedding will take place Saturday, March 8th, 1975 at 7 p.m. in St. Luke's Anglican Church, Archdeacon C. Wolff officiating.

Weddings

Bertrand — Grills

Father D. Lehane officiated at a double-ring ceremony in St. Andrew's Cathedral on December 20, 1974, at 7:30 p.m. when Kathleen Anne, daughter of Mrs. Charles Grills, and the late Mr. C. Grills, exchanged wedding vows with Mr. A. Wayne Bertrand, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Lesiuk.

Given in marriage by her uncle, Mr. Dick Coles, the bride was lovely in a full length gown of white satin, edged in Maribou. Her Maribou headdress held her chapel illusion veil. She carried a colonial bouquet of red and white roses. Maid of honour, Miss Heather Spearing, bridesmaids, Miss Trudy Muiser and Miss Margaret Elliott, wore identical gowns of red velvet and carried bouquets of red and white roses. Best man was Mr. Dennis Besler, and ushers were Messrs. Cameron Bertrand and Derek Lesiuk.

A reception was held at Tally-Ho Travelodge. Music for dancing was provided by "Willow," and Mr. Dick Coles proposed the bridal toast.

Out-of-town guests came from Alberta.

Carmichael — McIlree

The marriage is announced of Mrs. Helen McIlree, to Lieut.-Cmdr. Donn Carmichael in the Chapel of the Church of St. John the Divine on Saturday the 25th of January. The groom was attended by his brother Mr. Colin Carmichael. The bride's attendants were Mrs. D. A. M. Patterson and the bride's youngest daughter Shelagh.

A reception followed at C.F.B. Esquimalt. Lieut.-Cmdr. and Mrs. Carmichael will holiday in Hawaii.

Bisson — Dampier

A double-ring ceremony was solemnized on January 17, 1975, at 7 p.m. in St. Andrew's Chapel, when Teona Elizabeth Marie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Dampier, became the bride of Douglas Larry Bisson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Bisson. Father D. Lehane officiated.

Matwijecky — McGillivary

Mrs. George Bertram McGillivary, Victoria, B.C., is pleased to announce the marriage of her daughter Jane Sandilands McGillivray, to Cornelius Matwijecky in Ottawa, Saturday, January 25th, 1975.

Badenhorst — Wood

Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Wood, 2414 Beworth Street, are happy to announce the marriage of their eldest daughter Mary-Anne Monica, to Dr. C. Badenhorst of Pretoria, South Africa.

The wedding was performed on January 11, 1975 in Boshof, South Africa.

'Traffic Saturation' Successful

GRAND PRAIRIE (CP) — A two-week "traffic saturation" experiment by the Grande Prairie RCMP has cut the city's accident rate in half, the Mounties say.

The experiment, an all-out clampdown on traffic violators, from drivers operating their vehicles with frosted windshields to those making illegal turns and lane changes, was a big success, said Constable Robert Gallup, who came up with the idea.

"It was really good. We took statistics and compared them with the same two weeks in January, 1974. In 1974 there were 41 accidents for the two-week period. We had 20 this year, a little better than half the normal number."

The experiment started two weeks ago in the city of almost 15,000. The RCMP handed out traffic tickets for every infraction they could find in an effort to crack down on

elizabeth forbes

We are told enthusiasm is a powerful asset when a person is working toward a definite goal.

If that is so, then Ms. (she insisted on the Ms.) Gene Errington, former ombudsman for Vancouver Status of Women, member of the B.C. Human Rights Commission, and more recently appointed provincial Status of Women co-ordinator, is half-way to accomplishing what she has been authorized to do.

Bright, knowledgeable and with a soft, yet determined voice, she tells you quickly and in a few decisive words, of her plans and her hopes.

Ms. Errington is now attached to the office of Marc Eliesen, planning adviser to the cabinet.

Her terms of reference as co-ordinator, also give her the title of consultant adviser.

"In that connection I look at every department of government," she explains, "I search out what programs are being initiated to improve the position of women and I make sure such programs do not overlap."

She will also work through the province "as soon as the weather improves," to pinpoint the needs "as far as women are concerned" and again to "search out" programs that have been organized and where new ones can be of use.

A further responsibility accepted by Ms. Errington is that of liaison between the federal and provincial governments for International Women's Year.

"Actually this is a two-way street," she says. "I must learn what is planned at federal level and in turn, present British Columbia's plans to them. It's really an exchange of ideas."

Asked about provincial plans for IWY she explained, "We are in the process of developing a program policy right now but it hasn't been finalized."

There will eventually be "a certain amount of money available," she says, "but that too, is still to be finalized."

Gene Errington is working from a desk in the crowded office of the planning adviser but within a few weeks she expects to have her own office and a small staff.

"That will give me a better opportunity to concentrate on co-ordinating plans and to arrange a travel schedule."

She also hopes "eventually" to publish a newsletter "that will tell of women's activities throughout the province."

Looking briefly at International Women's Year, she points out that the United Nations, in proclaiming IWY, urged all countries "to closely examine their laws regarding women and to take action where discrimination is found."

Right now the provincial government is doing that, she says "through the Attorney-General's office, where they are looking at all provincial legislation, searching out discriminations and hopefully planning changes."

There is also a provincial-regional council on family and children's law, set up in the public service division of the Department of Labor.

Ms. Errington said she found "much encouragement" too, when she sat in on a recent meeting that saw the initiation of an equal opportunities program to ensure equal treatment of all job applicants wtihin the government and public service.

In monitoring the various departments of government she also found further encouragement in the fact that an in-depth study of school text books, with thought of eliminating sex discrimination, is in progress in the Department of Education.

That in the Department of Economic Development a division of women's rights has been established. And that a task force has been set up in the engineering department to study all the possibilities for women engineers.

"Why not?" she says of that last. "Interest in engineering is increasing amongst women. For example, a year ago only one woman was registered in that field at University of British Columbia . . . today there are 14."

Enthusiasm mingles with confidence when this dedicated young woman goes on to say she believes "we are progressing on all levels . . . we are getting more and more into decision and policy making positions.

"However, there is still much work if we are to continue progressing . . . and that work must be done by women themselves . . . we cannot get others to do it for us."

She believes this as the thinking and the hope of the United Nations in proclaiming IWY.

"The United Nations never intended International Women's Year to be merely a 12-month effort," she says.

"It was meant to get things started . . . to get women thinking, acting and working toward the future."

To "make this happen" in B.C., Gene Errington needs to hear from every women's group "no matter how small, no matter how large."

She wants to know their plans, their ideas and their dreams now and for the years ahead.

If she gets that co-operation, then you can be sure, she will accomplish what she has been appointed to do.

Substitutes for Expensive Beef

By MARY MOORE

Canadians do not need to be persuaded to eat beef because they like it. However, at present the price is too high for many incomes. As a result housewife-cooks are willing to substitute.

One hundred grams (roughly ¼ pound) of lean BEEF contain 224 calories; the three common minerals calcium, phosphorous and iron and the B vitamins.

One hundred grams (roughly ¼ pound) of boneless, skinless CODFISH contain 74 calories: the common minerals calcium, phosphorous and iron, B vitamins and some C. (Excellent for reducers.)

One hundred grams (roughly ¼ pound) lean CHICKEN contain 200 calories; the common minerals calcium, phosphorous and iron and the B vitamins.

One hundred grams DRIED NAVY BEANS contain 338 calories; the common minerals calcium, phosphorous and iron, the B vitamins and some C.

The calorie, mineral and vitamin content of eggs and cheese have been given in a previous instalment of this series.

As mentioned above housewives are willing to substitute, so in an earnest attempt to make our abundant fish harvest appetizing and economical I have selected a French method of serving Canadian codfish.

CODFISH ALLEMANDE
(serves 6 to 8)

2 lbs. fresh frozen codfish fillets

Sauce:
2 tbsp. margarine
2 tbsp. flour
1½ c. hot water
¼ c. white wine (see below)
1 tbsp. chicken bouillon cordial
½ tsp. curry powder
1 tbsp. lemon juice
1 c. crisp packaged croutons or buttered dry breadcrumbs

Arrange fillets side by side in 13x9" buttered baking dish that can be taken to the table.

Make a Sauce by blending margarine and flour and then stirring in hot water and wine until thick. (Note: If you do not have the wine substitute another ¼ cup hot water.) Add chicken bouillon cordial, curry and lemon juice. Pour all over fish, sprinkle with croutons or crumbs. Bake at 450 deg. Fahr. about 20 to 25 minutes. DO NOT OVER BAKE. Test thickest portion of cod at centre to see if it is opaque. If so remove from oven at once and serve.

To serve, with lifter cut each fillet in half crosswise and spoon some sauce and croutons over.

If there are young children in the family this dish of two pounds of lean boneless cod can be stretched to serve 8.

Zonta Club Donates Lamp to Hospital

The Royal Jubilee Hospital has received its first high intensity lamp, a donation from the Victoria Zonta Club.

Hospital administrator A. C. Pickles described the $300 lamp as an extremely useful and needed piece of equipment.

The lamp will be used for local anesthetic operations in intensive care and in the open-heart unit.

For intensive care patients usually kept in dimly-lit rooms, the lamp "will relieve their discomfort during operations and at the same time increase the efficiency and improve working conditions of the doctor," Pickles said.

The Zonta Club is a service organization of executive and professional women encouraging women's participation in social welfare activities.

The Victoria General Hospital is to receive an intravenous pump donated by the club.

Other projects undertaken by the club include an $11,000 donation to the Pakistan Relief Fund, sponsorship of refugee girls in the Gaza strip and a fund drive to equip a UNICEF mobile clinic.

Designer Stuck on Pins

NEW YORK (NYT) — The safety pin, somebody once said, is one of the best-designed objects around. Of course, they're handy to pin up a broken shoulder strap or diapers, but who really looks at one?

Tamiko Ferguson hadn't, until one day when she went into a store to buy some safety pins and was struck with how attractive the different sizes and colors looked in bunches. "They are really beautiful in themselves," she said. "A lot of them together are wonderful."

Tamiko (she uses just her first name in designing) took her safety pins home and began playing with ideas. She hung a few silvery ones on a metal circlet and had a handsome necklace. Then she tried mixing large and small ones, silver and gold colored ones, used them in collar shapes, dangles, and bibs.

The results are surprising. Until one looks at it closely, a geometric arrangement of small silvery and golden pins resembles an expensive piece from a fine jeweller. A hundred large silver-colored pins from a long dangle on one necklace and 700 tiny golden pins are linked together for a long fall on another. For a touch of color, Tamiko sometimes adds glass or wooden beads to the pins.

Tamiko studied sculpture in her native Japan and went on to design in glass there. She came to New York in 1961, hoping to continue her profession, but found that most fine glass designs here were imported. She married Ian Ferguson, an architect, and went back to sculpture, and also did some fine jewelry for the Sculpture to Wear Gallery.

The safety pins have opened a new and amusing field for her. Isn't she concerned that do-it-yourselvers will copy her designs? Not really, she replied. Unless the pins are bought in huge lots they're expensive, and it takes a lot of patience to link 700 pins together.

Doing the Town

With DOROTHY FRASER

Roy's are getting a lovely face-lift! . . .

You could have knocked us over with the proverbial feather when we dropped in to Roy Imports last Tuesday and saw what was going on! . . . A bit of a mess, admittedly, but they're in the process of tearing out partitions to make the shop roomier . . . putting in new cases with glass doors to hold the hundreds of sweaters for which Roy's are famous . . . laying rich, green wall-to-wall carpeting, and painting the whole store a cheerful, lighter green . . . in a word, refurbishing it to the hilt . . . yet being careful not to spoil the atmosphere of this delightful store . . . It should be completed by the middle of February . . . and really it's going to be lovely! . . . meanwhile, we were shown some of the new arrivals still under wraps . . . Pin corduroy all-weather coats, made in Israel . . . showerproof and crease-resistant, they're trenchcoat style with the loose yokes back and front . . . fully lined . . . all sizes, in mink, light beige and a soft, pretty shade of green . . . These are really very fashionable coats, with that special European look you only find in very expensive coats . . . and yet these beauties are tagged at just $95! . . . You'd be smart to have a look at them before they're all snatched up! . . . Same thing goes if you're interested in capes for spring . . . Roy's are getting capes in mohair, Harris tweed and a lightweight reversible two-faced fabric . . . plain one side, patterned the other, and bound with braid . . . made especially for them by Bickler's of London . . . There are new Mayfair suits . . . Gor-Ray skirts in every conceivable style . . . a new shipment of Fair Isle sweaters, both pullovers and cardigans . . . Roy Imports, 817 Government St., 384-4737

Luxurious leather clothes are a sound investment.

New Amalfi shoes for spring . . .

This week we paid our first visit to Munday's in some time . . . ever since we acquired our share of goodies in their January sale, in fact . . . so we were happy to see all the new spring shoes now blossoming like flowers in the store! . . . Most of the Amalfi shoes have arrived from Italy . . . and right beautiful they are! If you're a shoe nut, like us, you won't be able to resist some of them! . . . Patterns are all brand new this spring . . . daintier, more elegant than ever! . . . Some heels are a little higher than last year's . . . Caramel is one of THE big colors . . . and quite a bit of green is being shown . . . Herewith some of the highlights: . . . "Perseo" . . . an elegant T-strap shoe in soft calf in white, caramel or green, with contrasting stitching, and in black patent . . . $46 . . . "Paglia" is a beautifully lightweight walking shoe . . . a caramel kid ghillie tie with crepe sole, priced at $48 . . . "Gioia" is the name of a very soft kid shoe with mid-heel, closed toe with moccasin treatment on the vamp, and open heel . . . a nice sporty shoe in bone or caramel . . . which we think would look wonderful with pant suits . . . $46 for this . . . "Capital" is a shoe we predict will be a winner this spring . . . It's a young-looking shoe in beautifully light kid . . . with open toe and back . . . punched trim all around . . . Comes in white, caramel, green, red and squash . . . this latter color a yellowy gold . . . $44 . . . "Oran" is a very good fitting sandal with three wide-ish bands across the foot and a mid heel . . . It's a nice dress sandal, not extreme in style, which would fit a great variety of feet . . . White, putty, yellow, red or navy calf as well as in black patent . . . $33 at . . . Munday's, 1203 Douglas St., 383-2211.

A whole new sweater look — bare shoulders and tank top . . . with a short-sleeved crochet jacket.

Inexpensive dresses at Impacts . . .

We really flipped over the new cashmere sweaters we were shown at Impacts 'n' Imports this week . . . Pullovers with long sleeves, round necks and back zippers . . . this latter feature a great hairdo saver! . . . They're made by William Lockie of Hawick, Scotland . . . Come in lovely summery shades of ice blue, primrose and pink . . . and cost but $40 which is very reasonable for good quality cashmere nowadays! . . . Shetland pullovers with V-neck in green, yellow, red, white or navy are practically a steal at $18 . . . particularly nice for the younger set . . . We saw some handsome Paul Rogers pantsuits in two different styles and several attractive colors . . . Noticed a white one displayed with a Lyle and Scott yellow blouse . . . whole effect pretty swish! . . . There's a Paul Rogers printed blouse in a combination of colors which would tone in beautifully with the white, green, orange or blue pantsuit . . . These suits, by the way, are quite reasonable . . . Jackets are $55 and $60, according to which style you select . . . Slacks are tagged at $27 We were delighted to hear that Impacts have started something new . . . Realizing that there are many women who can't afford an awful lot of money for their clothes, but appreciate good, individual service such as you don't find in most stores selling inexpensive clothing . . . Impacts now have a group of inexpensive dresses which we think are very smart and attractive . . . For instance, we noticed a pretty green and white one for only $33.50 . . . others priced comparatively . . . Impacts are starting to receive the English dresses Mrs. Henderson bought in London last fall . . . Some of them by Susan Small who made Princess Anne's wedding dress . . . We advise an early visit to . . . Impacts 'n' Imports, 8 Centennial Square, 388-7023.

High-heeled sandals are the shoes to wear for evening.

Why not take up needlepoint? . . .

Ever thought you might like to try your hand at needlepoint but haven't a clue how to go about it? . . . Well, instead of just thinking about it . . . drop in to Christie's and talk to Mrs. Low or her assistant . . . They're glad to help people get started on needlepoint or petit point . . . They'll tell you what you need . . . help you select it . . . and then show you how to do the actual work . . . What's more you don't need to be a woman to enjoy doing needlepoint . . . Men in increasing numbers are taking it up for relaxation . . . therapy . . . release of business tensions . . . and turning out some very expert and beautiful work in the process . . . in fact, Mrs. Low tells us that a good percentage of her business is done with men! . . . We know we've told you this before . . . but we want to repeat . . . Christie's is the headquarters par excellence for everything pertaining to needlecraft . . . They carry a full line of needlepoint and petit point supplies . . . DMC and Anchor embroidery cottons . . . full lines of Paton's Beehive and DMC needlepoint yarns . . . and Penelope crewel wools from England . . . Crochet and knitting supplies and patterns . . . beautiful canvases . . . This week we noticed some new canvases . . . mostly charming English scenes . . . For cat lovers there's a lovely cat's head . . . ditto a horse's head for equine enthusiasts . . . A new lot of semi-worked canvases, too . . . Some very pretty florals with the flowers already worked so all you have to do is fill in the background . . . (This might be a good type of thing to get started on!) . . . There are a couple of canvases for making needlepoint handbags . . . After they're worked you send the canvas off to a firm in Winnipeg who makes it up into the handsomest handbag you've ever seen . . . a real heirloom type of thing! . . . More standing and lap frames have arrived at Christie's . . . to make your work easier! . . . Christie's, 818 Fort St., 384-8770.

Cotton is the big fabric, getting a jump on spring and carrying over into summer.

Wilson's is a Mecca for the well-dressed . . .

In Wilson's last week we struck up a conversation with a lady from Seattle . . . "I come over here periodically to shop," she told us . . . "My closet is chock-full of Wilson's clothes . . . only trouble is they never wear out . . . and I can never bear to part with them!" . . . And that, we thought, says an awful lot about the sort of clothing sold at Wilson's . . . Quality is so fine . . . styling so good . . . that things don't date . . . stand up to countless wearings . . . always keep you looking smart and well-turned-out! . . . Would you believe we're still wearing five-year-old Wilson suits and perfect strangers come up and express admiration? Well, it's a fact! . . . This week there's not too much new to tell you about because Wilson's have been stock taking . . . and most of the new arrivals are still in the nether regions . . . However, we did see some perfectly beautiful camelhair coats by Mayfair . . . a nice light weight of pure camelhair for spring . . . One style is semi-fitted . . . Buttons to the neck with a little gathered yoke . . . saddle stitch detailing . . . sizes 10 to 14 in this, priced at $230 . . . A second style has full raglan sleeves, wide notched lapels and welt seaming by way of trim . . . Sizes 8 to 18, tagged at $240 . . . Both these styles are really pretty . . . and camelhair, of course, looks wonderful on most women . . . can be worn over just about anything you can name! . . . Some delightful new Italian dresses with the Lucia label . . . Several long ones in gracefully styled polyester knit . . . one is navy and white with scoop neck and the new wide, short sleeves . . . fitted dresses has big red and gold poppies on a white background . . . ditto on black . . . For the size 18 woman . . . a delightful dress with deep V neck back and front. Navy, chartreuse and green . . . artfully cut for a slimming effect . . . W. & J. Wilson Limited, 1221 Government St., 383-7177 and 1210 Newport Ave., 592-2821.

In swimwear, the string, the bikini and the maillot or tank suit . . . like a one-piece racing suit . . . are what's happening for women.

Spring's prettiest pant suits . . .

We forgot about Hillside Mall not opening until 9:30 a.m. and consequently arrived a bit early for our visit to Charmante's last Monday . . . However, they let us in at the back door . . . which turned out to be a good thing because traversing the stock room we got a peep at some of the new things just in the process of being unpacked . . . Noticed some nice spring coats . . . white ones in a wool basket weave, and beige and white combined . . . And the most delightful pant suits . . . 100% polyester with embroidered yokes . . . in pink and sea green . . . pretty and spring-like as early crocuses! . . . Two whole cartons . . . as yet unpacked . . . full of blouses and pant tops . . . Very nice, too, from what we could glimpse of them! . . . In the store itself . . . which as usual looked most colorful and charming . . . we spotted some new lightweight mohair coats . . . McMullen pure silk dresses which we thought particularly attractive . . . One doesn't see too many pure silk dresses around these days, does one? And there's a sort of panache to real silk which never palls . . . These dresses are shirtwaist style with V necks and front pleats . . . Saw them in orange and yellow . . . greens and blues . . . Also a pretty red and white print. Other new spring merchandise includes Lacoste dresses . . . some with jackets . . . There's a smart turquoise sleeveless dress with Chanel-style jacket, the V neck and jacket bordered with white . . . Some new all-wool capes . . . big brown and beige checks . . . a herringbone tweed and a camelhair . . . And some lightweight pantsuits in easy-care printed polyester . . . Still a few good sale bargains left, so drop in soon, won't you? . . . Charmante's, Hillside Shopping Centre, 595-1555.

Alvarez-Welch Medical Report

By Dr. WILLIAM WELCH

That man is suggestible is hardly a controversial assertion. That any individual man's suggestibility is necessarily subject to purposive manipulation, as for example by hypnosis, is another question.

It is well known that many people simply cannot be hypnotized. Others fall quickly into a trance with sheeplike submission. Now Dr. Herbert Spiegel of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Columbia University (New York) has devised a test that not only predicts your capacity to by hypnotized, but grades your relative susceptibility on a scale of 0 to 4, grade 4 being the most susceptible, grade 1 susceptible, but much less so.

On the basis of his studies, he estimates approximately 74 per cent of the population possesses some degree of hypnotizability; that is, they range themselves somewhere between grade 1 and grade 4. Those that fall into grades 3 and 4, the most hypnotizable, represent nearly 40 per cent of the population.

The test, which is crucial in the hypnotic induction profile, is disarmingly simple. It involves the clinical measurement of the subject's capacity to roll his eyes upward. And it is the high-rise eye-rollers whose capacity to accept suggestion is maximal. Among those who are grade 3 and grade 4 eye-rollers are many who may be potential candidates for surgical anaesthesia by hypnosis.

Also, in these two groups especially, are those who may be benefitted most by suggestion and hypnosis in the treatment of chronic organic diseases, and often show gratifying improvement. Many forms of psychiatric problems also may be effectively handled by suggestion and hypnosis in those whose eye-rolling measures out in the third and fourth category.

What is particularly interesting in this effort to quantify suggestibility or hypnotizability is the light that such studies have thrown on the persons who will respond well to acupuncutre. Dr. R. L. Katz and his group report a study in which all their patients, with one exception, who were poor hypnotic subjects according to the eye-roll test had no relief of pain by acupuncture.

Dr. Robert T. London of New York reports that his successes and failures with acupuncture also closely followed the highs and lows of the eye-roll test.

These findings, apart from the help they provide in telling us which patients will respond to hypnosis, go a long way toward making sense of the long-standing observation that objective differences have always existed among candidates for hypnosis. But we have not known how to measure that difference.

That among those who are susceptible to hypnosis and may profit from such susceptibility should also be the same subjects who are responsive to acupuncture puts the whole question of acupuncture in a very different light than it has been up to now.

Certainly it seems most reasonable that a subject contemplating undergoing acupuncture should first be tested by the eye-roll technique. If he or she turns out to be a susceptible grade 3 or grade 4, it is difficult not to be inclined to favor a trial of hypnosis before rushing to acupuncture.

This is true for several obvious reasons. Although it has not been widely stressed, punching needles into the body is not always an entirely beign procedure. There is the danger of infection, for one thing, especially in the region of joint cavities.

A more serious complications has been reported in patients who have suffered a collapsed lung as a result of needles inadvertently punched into the chest wall, piercing the lung.

Even without such obvious dangers, more and more these days when we have a choice between two procedures one that invades the body and one that does not, we tend to pick the latter on the sensible principle that the time to get out of trouble is before you get into it.

dear abby

84 Years Wed!

DEAR ABBY: I am writing this for my great-grandmother, who is 99 years old.

My great-grandfather passed away a few weeks ago at the age of 101.

"Ma" and "Pa" (as we've always called them) were first married June 6th, 1889, and every year after that, on their anniversary, they went back to the little church where they were married and had another marriage ceremony to renew their marriage vows.

Last June, Pa remarked that he wouldn't be at all surprised if he and Ma had set a world's record for being married more times than anyone else alive. Then he said if that was really a fact he wanted to have it engraved on the double headstone he already had picked out for himself and Ma.

Abby, here is where you come in. Will you please ask your readers if they know of anyone who has had their marriage vows renewed more than 84 times? If nobody writes in, I think maybe a record has been set. Thanking you kindly. — Mrs. David Joseph, Flatwoods, Ky.

DEAR MRS. JOSEPH: I'll inquire. But I doubt that anyone will challenge your great grandparents' record.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 14-year-old boy who is one of three children. My parents have been divorced for five years and I live with my mother.

My father lives 10 miles away. The first year he made little effort to see me, and I haven't seen him since. My mother has had him in court several times, and it's hammer and tongs to get any support money out of him. My father has a good job. He's in construction. Every Christmas, he mails me five dollars.

My problem is, if he isn't interested in seeing or supporting me, should I continue to accept the five dollars, or should I mail it back to him? I always feel like a hypocrite when I write him a "thank-you" note. — Once-A-Year-Son

DEAR SON: Why should he get off scot-free? Accept the five dollars and drop it into the Salvation Army kettle.

DEAR ABBY: When my husband and I go out to dinner and the waitress brings the check, my husband will put the money and the tip on the table and leave.

This may save time, but I don't think it's right. What if, just by accident, he doesn't leave enough money? Won't the waitress be stuck for the difference?

Also, what if somebody should walk by and see the money on the table and just pick it up? Again, the poor waitress will be held responsible.

When I mentioned these possibilities to my husband he said: "Don't worry, a good waitress is on her toes. Nobody would get out the door in the above-mentioned situations."

Who is right? — San Clemente.

DEAR SAN: You are. Waitresses have enough to do without watching the tables, the departing customers, and the door.

Action Group Branches Out

From handling the problems involving welfare rights and housing, the Community Action Group in Victoria has expanded significantly into other areas of helping people.

This week the group marked its sixth year in existence with an open house at its headquarters, 551½ Fisgard.

The program started on Jan. 15, 1969, co-ordinated by Susan Talbot from her home.

From there it moved to the basement of St. Andrews Cathedral and then to its present location.

During its time at the Cathedral the group had no funding and had great difficulty in paying the phone bill and transportation costs.

To find money for stamps and office supplies, the Community Action staff held rummages and auctions and were guest speakers at various organizations, which donated funds.

The group received a $200 grant from the intermunicipal committee and a year later received $2,000 from the federal state department.

Later Community Action was designated as a pilot project for one year under the national health and welfare department.

The group has been involved with UIC, old age pensioners, Fostering Homes, Family Court (legal aid), human rights and immigration.

The staff also became knowledgable in do-it-yourself divorce and found debt counselling was needed in many cases.

There is one full time and one half-time worker through a grant from the department of human resources, 2¼ workers through a grant through consumers services for work on debt counselling and bankruptcy, and 1¼ workers through the corrections department, acting as a resource to the community diversion centre.

There is a Manpower "Outreach" program that is a job-readying process for clients, involving two workers.

The Community Action Group office is used as a resource centre and a drop-in centre.

It's All Tucked Away Right in Living-Room

Look at what this bold built-in does for an informal family area — or you could put it right in the living room. Big cabinets and deep shelves hold everything — trophies, turntables, even a refreshment bar that's the lifeline of parties.

The bar (left) has its own lighting and sink, plus space below for bottles or a compact refrigerator. Next to it are cabinets that your expanding entertainment centre and record or tape collection will never outgrow.

The tall niche shows off your most cherished trophy, piece of sculpture or antique; or put an ultraviolet bulb in the spotlight above and you could use the niche as a place to grow a small tree.

Except for installation of the sink and lights, this is an easy enough do-it-yourself job. If you're just a beginner, don't be afraid to attempt it — everything goes together with nails or screws, glue and easy-to-handle butt joints.

Nail together panels of ¾ inch plywood for the thick uprights, then toenail them to the ceiling and floor. Be sure everything is plumb so your doors will hang right.

Brace the uprights with double-thickness base shelves; all other shelves hang on adjustable strips.

Hang the doors, trim the top and bottom with moldng, and you're ready for the fun — that exciting paint job. Plywood — your biggest materials expense — will cost about $100.00.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Forecast for Sunday, Feb. 2

By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Accent is on how you relate to obligations. You find out what is expected as contrasted to what can be delivered. Older persons abound in decisions, expectations, anxieties. Answer to dilemma is made available.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Spotlight now is on special relationship, including mate, partner or prospective in-law. You discover what one "at top" may be contemplating. You are called upon for advice — and you may soon assume additional responsibility.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Accent is on work, health, the way to bring aspirations closer to reality. Aquarius, Leo persons may be in picture. Unorthodox procedures could gain constructive results. Know it and be an innovator. Your intuition works overtime — and may be "missing link."

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Unusual lunar aspect coincides now with impulse, love, involvement and settlement of money issue. Your social life accelerates. Some details are elusive. Key now is to ride with tide, to give full play to sense of humor — and to make most of new contacts.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Practical affairs dominate — you discover details of special arrangement. This could include property value, sales and purchases. Specifics are featured as contrasted to speculative ventures. Insist on factual information.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You move about, call, direct, receive messages. Relative, close neighbor reveals something that has impact of surprise, possible scandal. Be ready to evaluate, to do your own checking and to arrive at your own conclusions.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Cycle is high — get going on your own. Creative abilities surge forward — you can effect significant, profitable changes. You are able now to track down genuine bargain which can beautify surroundings and delight family member.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Logjam is released. What was moribund becomes activated. You select, refine and define — you come alive. Choices multiply and cycle is high. Judgment, intuition are on target. Pisces, Virgo play roles.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). You have enthusiastic backing for promotion. Persons who, in recent past, may have been indifferent will be in your private cheering section. Capricorn, Cancer play significant roles. You will be handling added responsibility — and more pressure.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Money in connection with journey, proposed change is highlighted. Your desire to learn, to educate yourself regarding language and customs, is accented. Get rid of burden which belongs to another.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): New start could mean added prestige. Study Sagittarius message for valid hint. Your intuitive, creative abilities are highlighted — and appreciated. Civic affairs, basic business duties command attention. You will be more independent. Know it and exude confidence!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You receive valuable information as result of reading — or through special channels. Open lines of communication. Be receptive to calls, correspondence, unique messages. Aquarius, Leo could play significant roles.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are sensitive, creative, moody and temperamental. You have tendency to be possessive. You are affectionate, will sacrifice for loved ones. If single, this could be a marriage year. Married or single, you will be handling more responsibility, could go into business for yourself. Cancer, Capricorn persons play key roles in your life. September will be one of your most important months of 1975.

Forecast for Monday, Feb. 3

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Accent is on inventory, taxes, insurance policies, money of mate, partner. You get chance to start anew, to be creative and independent. Leo, Aquarius figure prominently. One you care for reciprocates. Your sentimental streak becomes evident — you may cry tears of joy!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Lie low. Study implications of legal agreements. Give more attention than usual to partner, mate. Be aware of public relations. Some persons, obviously envious, may be trying to give you a difficult time. Play cards close to chest. Surprise element is your greatest ally.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Accent is on steady pace as opposed to sensational bursts of speed. You can gain co-operation from one who understands your basic requirements. Your "nerves" may interfere with digestive processes. You are impatient for most part—but news comes which makes you optimistic.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Good moon aspect coincides now with change, children, variety and change of scenery. Aquarius, Leo and Scorpio play prominent roles. Your timing, in games of chance, is sharp. Element of luck rides with you.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You are in process of building — and rebuilding. Some "busy people" may not want to leave you alone. You will go through a variety of emotions. One who loves you may be exasperated. Key is to be as honest as possible—and to let chips fall as they will.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Short trips, bursts of inspiration, superficial reports are featured. You make peace with family member. You make purchase which had been put off, delayed due to price squabble. You gain new insights to what really counts most—where you are concerned.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Discern money loopholes. Protect possessions. Don't give up something for nothing. Pisces, Virgo could figure prominently. See as is—avoid deception of your own creation. Be selective without insisting on perfection. You are going to be paid for efforts—handsomely!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You have more going for you than might be imagined. Highlight confidence, initiative and willingness to accept more responsibility. Highlight willingness to take chance on your own abilities.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You complete, finish, get image on screen. What seemed obvious in past may now appear to be subtly deceptive. This is time for you to make romantic illusions turn to realities. Secret get-together could work to your advantage.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Accent is on friends hopes, wishes. Your creative reserves are utilized. Personal magnetism is highlighted. Romance is in picture. You feel more, give more and accomplish plenty. You come alive. Leo, Aquarius individuals figure prominently.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Ambitions, ability to gain co-operation from one who controls budget—these are emphasized. Cancer, Capricorn are likely to be in picture. Say "yes" to overtime assignment. You gain by handling more responsibility.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Good lunar aspect coincides at this time with long journeys, educational efforts, communication, publishing and advertising. Submit themes, campaigns, formats. Spread influence and be versatile. You will be invited to important function.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are artistic, temperamental and have "profound" sense of humor. August will be your most significant month this year. Gemini, Sagittarius persons play important roles in your life. You have weight problem, love to travel, love more than one person simultaneously, have ability to have too many irons in fire and still keep the flame going. You complete major cycle this year—get ready to let go of the past!

Acting Auditions

Auditions for admission to the Camosun College-Bastion Theatre Professional Actor Training Program are set for April.

Interested persons should contact the Registrar, Camosun College, Lansdowne Road.

Director of the program is Maurice Harty who delighted audiences here last year with his production of Behan's The Hostage.

Harty has worked with professionals in England, his native Jamaica and New York. He has been trained in all aspects of the theatre as actor, technician and director by the internationally known Erwin Piscater.

Students enrolled in the first and second years of the program will study stage fighting and fencing with Patrick Crean from March 24 to April 18.

Crean is renowned as an instructor in these arts. He is fencing master and fight director for the Stratford Festival Theatre and has staged fights for several Errol Flynn films.

Dayan Doesn't Think Mid-East War Looms

DAYAN
. . . hopeful

ZAHALA, Israel (CNYT) — Moshe Dayan has never run with the crowd.

Even today, when it is virtually taken for granted that another round of Middle East fighting will erupt in the spring or summer, Israel's most prominent iconoclast disagrees.

"I don't think it will happen," he said in a three-hour interview at his home — the first he has given since he was forced to resign as minister of defence last June.

"The Egyptians don't want war and the Syrians aren't ready for it, not in the next three months anyway. There's a danger of course, but I don't think full-scale war is imminent."

Dayan also challenged the conventional motion that the Arab summit conference at Rabat and Yasir Arafat's appearance at the United Nations constituted a major victory for the Palestinians and a setback for Israel.

"I think it is working out perfectly for us," he said. "The practical result was to reduce the chances of an independent Palestinian state ever forming on the west bank and the Gaza strip. Since I'm opposed to that, I couldn't be happier."

Dayan's major points included the following:

—He feels Israel can actually benefit from a withdrawal from her present military line in the Sinai, but should pull back from the Sinai mountain passes only in exchange for a commitment from Egypt not to resume the war. The Abu Rudeis oilfields, he feels, have an economic value to Israel that "should be discussed" in the context of a new agreement. The present line, in Dayan's opinion, is too close to Egypt's vital interests — the Suez Canal and the Gulf of Suez — and amounts to a "fuse" that could ignite another round of fighting.

—He believes Egypt's President, Amwar el-Sadat, is politically capable of concluding another separate interim agreement with Israel despite the pressure against it from the rest of the Arab world.

At the same time, he doubts that Egypt really wants a complete Israeli withdrawal from all occupied Egyptian territory at this point, lest she be accused of abandoning her Arab allies.

—He sees no real possibility of negotiating a second-interim agreement with the Syrians in the foreseeable future. He doubts Syria will ever make peace with Israel as long as she occupies the Golan Heights, and since he feels Israel must remain there for her own defense, he sees no political alternative to the present uneasy truce with Syria.

—He believes that whether or not Israel reaches new interim agreements with her Arab neighbors, informal arrangements can be worked out with Egypt and Jordan that will gradually normalize relations and defence tensions in the area.

—He feels certain that the overwhelming majority of the 700,000 Arabs on the west bank of the Jordan River will choose to retain their Jordanian citizenship rather than exchange it for membership in a still-theoretical Palestinian state under Arafat. The net result, in Dayan's view, will be an erosion of the political appeal of the Palestine Liberation Organization on the west bank.

New Hospital For Cumberland

The British Columbia Treasury Board has approved an expenditure of $2.5 million for a new intermediate care and diagnostic hospital at Cumberland.

The new unit will replace a 50-bed hospital used as a senior citizens' nursing home.

Health Minister Dennis Cocke said Friday the new facility will be built on the existing hospital grounds but added that it is hoped the old building, of some historical significance, can be preserved.

Federal Wage Follows

OTTAWA (CP) — Traditionally a pace-setter, the federal minimum wage has fallen back to about mid-pack among the country's 13 separate pay minimums.

When the federal minimum went to $2.20 only 10 months ago from $1.90, the wage set by Ottawa ranked second to B.C.'s. The 10 provinces and two territories set their own levels.

Now Ontario and Saskatchewan at $2.25, Manitoba at $2.30 and the Northwest Territories at $2.50 have joined B.C.'s $2.50 in the group with rates higher than the federal minimum.

The Yukon also has a higher rate of $2.30 but it has a special formula equal to the federal rate plus 10 cents.

Even a have-not province like Newfoundland has a provincial minimum equal to the federal rate while New Brunswick's will be up to $2.30 by July. Quebec's now is $2.15.

Federal labor officials now are reviewing the minimum wage and when they set a recommended figure, it will be presented to the cabinet. The ministers must approve the increase.

MORAL: Never, EVER, forget that your opponent is always ready to jump on your mistakes.

YET ANOTHER RUSSIAN PRODIGY

The Candidates' series to decide who will represent the rest of the world in the attempt to wrest the World Champion's crown from Bobby Fischer, has been dominated by the Russians until now only two contenders, both from the Soviet Union, remain, veteran Victor Horchnoi and young anatoly Karpov.

But in chess, Russia rests on no laurels. It's quite safe to say that if every well-known Russian chess player were suddenly to drop the game, the Soviet Union would still hold a dominating place in world chess.

For example, have you heard of Sergei Makarychev? Chances are you haven't, but a recent release from the USSR's Novosti Press Agency indicates that 19-year-old Sergei, cybernetics student at Moscow State University, will soon be as well-known as Tal, Keres, Botvinnik, Petrosian, Spassky and all the rest.

This year, after racking up a victory in the 1973 International Youth Tournament in Hungary and beating several grandmasters to place third in the USSR Championship, he won the European Junior Championship, staging a fine comeback after losing a game and drawing two others.—

Makarychev, says Novosti, admires Mikhael Tal's combinations and Tigran Petrosian's positional play "But he believes Boris Spassky's versatile style and Robert Fischer's clear logic are closest to his style."

So once again, we appear to have an Russian whose eye is not upon the sparrow but, instead, upon the eagle.

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Land Commission has approved most of the applications made by property owners for exclusion from agricultural land reserve provisions, says chairman William Lane.

Lane made the statement after an earlier news story claimed fewer than 40 per cent of the applications had been approved.

Venice neighbor great art city in northern Italy

By KIMMIS HENDRICK

VICENZA, Italy — This is the town that made architect Andrea Palladio famous, and it is one of northern Italy's great art cities. Students of architecture flock to Vicenza from all over the world to see the buildings Palladio designed in the 16th century.

Walk down the Corso Andrea Palladio, Vicenza's shopping street, and you realize you have seen banks, churches, mansions all your life that must have been inspired by Palladio's genius.

An authority says his "influence on the development of English and American architecture probably has been greater than that of all other Renaissance architects combined."

But you do not have to be an architecture specialist to love this non-touristy city. It makes a good jumping off place for seeing other great art cities — Venice, Padua, Pergamo, for instance. It is just a 20-minute drive (40 minutes by train) from Venice and is an easier, considerably less expensive place to stay.

When we visited this "Venice without canals," he found James S. Ackerman's book, Palladio, proved a helpful guide.

Our first stop was the magnificent Btsilica, the hall of justice, for which the young Palladio designed the surrounding colonnade.

We thought we could just spare that afternoon for Vicenza, but we stayed — to see Venice the next day, and to spend another day seeing Vicenza's other notable monument, Palladio's last work, the Teatro Olimpico. It is a fascinating adaptation of ancient Roman theatre design, now used for music and dramas.

An interesting sight in the neighboring city of Bergamo is its old town, situated on a high hill. It was here in his student days that Bernard Berenson got the inspiration to devote his life to the study and analysis of Renaissance painting.

Pricesc In Veronoa, Bergamo, Padua and Vicenza we found pleasant hotel rooms for about $10 double, and choices were numerous.

Italian food, of course, is a treat anywhere — the pastas are often marvellous, spaghetti is almost always perfectly prepared and, in northern Italy, fruits and vegetables look fit for kings (and are). And the spread of hors d-oeuvres customarily placed near the entrance of a restaurant has the delicate visual charm of a bouquet.

Verona's Dodici Apostoli is a famous restaurant, fairly expensive but well worth the cost. Bergamo's Taverno del Colleoni in the old high city is renowned, and the Cappello D'Oro, in the low modern city, should be if it is not. In Vicenza we found a delicatessen so near the centre you cannot miss it, where the choices and the service were outstanding.

We got the fakings of a picnic there; it was a Lucullan feast.

French Quarter: Impact immense

By NEIL MORGAN

NEW ORLEANS — The French Quarter is only six blocks by 12 blocks in size. Its impact on the visitor remains immense. But what Roulhac Toledano is trying to save is the old New Orleans that still lurks down unlikely streets and along skid rows. They are places that a visitor may think he's discovered five years from now if she wins some of her battles.

She led us politely on a walking tour through the Garden District, with its superb cornstalk iron grills and stately verandas, but she regards that as tourist territory.

When we roamed the back streets with her, past neglected shotgun houses built like Pullman cars and the Creole cottages in which New Orleans' middle classes lived for generations, Roulhac Toledano grew rhapsodic.

"Fortunately for New Orleans," she said, "this city languished for a long time. That's why so much unique architecture is left on these side streets. But when some consciousness dawned of this great treasure, it was almost too late."

Roulhac Toledano is a cyclone of energy, as good a symbol as one can find of the new spirit in this grand old city.

She is a burr in Mayor Moon Landrieu's progressive administration.

Through the Junior League and through her three books on New Orleans architecture, she pushes for understanding and restoration of the city's heritage.

There is an impasse here, for instance, in the care of New Orleans' cemeteries. Ground level is below the Mississippi River level, and after about 1800, it became compulsory to build tombs above the ground. From that time on, including two epidemics of cholera and yellow fever that took 14,000 lives, death and its paraphernalia have been uniquely visible in New Orleans.

But the Roman Catholic Church discourages any change, even weeding, in these city-owned cemeteries. Roulhac Toledano is among those who have sponsored "Adopt-a-Grave" parties on Sundays, when aesthetic-minded citizens have gone into these famous cemeteries and helped to restore them. No one has stopped them, so far.

"People have to be told something is pretty," she said blithely. "Americans don't tend to relate their history to visible architecture."

That is why she moves so rapidly, and why she feels that the revival of interest here in old architecture is coming too late.

"The more we talk about these old places, the more we spur demolition," she said. "Owners hurry to get in ahead of preservationists like myself."

Canadian Bank In Puerto Rico

SAN JUAN, P.R. (UPI) — The Bank of Nova Scotia will acquire majority interest in Puerto Rico's Banco Mercantil, subject to approval by the local bank's stockholders, a spokesman for the Banco Mercantil said Monday.

The spokesman said the Commonwealth Treasury Department had approved the transaction, but declined to give the cost.

The Bank of Nova Scotia has operated in Puerto Rico for a number of years.

New Zealand condenses a world of scenery

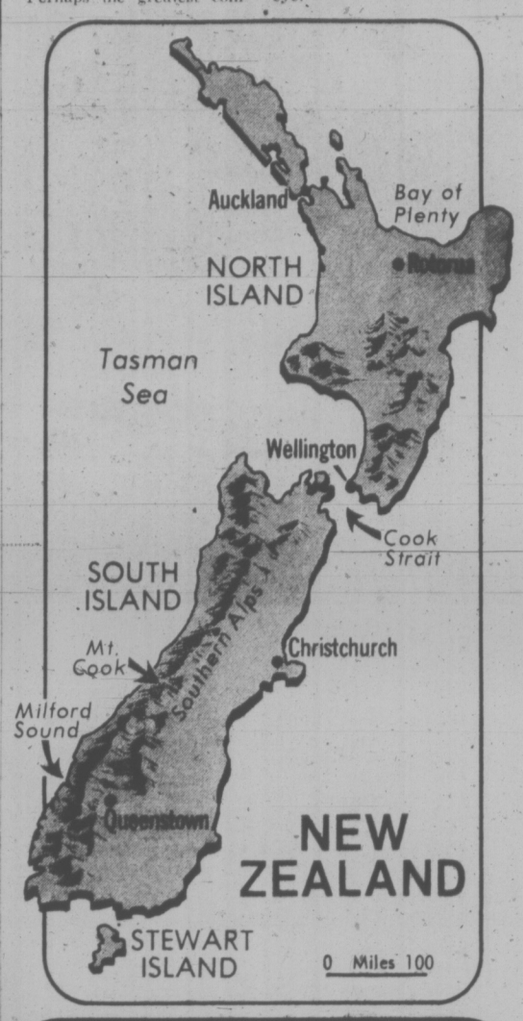
By RALPH HUBLEY
Christian Science Monitor

AUCKLAND, N.Z. — Why travel 7,000 miles from North America or Tokyo or even 1,200 miles from Sydney to visit the handful of islands called New Zealand?

Because, aficionados answered, a three-week trip here could compare with a three-month tour of the world. From subtropical beaches and waving palms to snow-capped Alps and icy glaciers, New Zealand condenses a world of scenery.

Perhaps the greatest compliment I could give to this 1,000-mile strip of mountains, lakes, and beaches is that the enthusiasts are largely right.

I arrived in this land, where sheep outnumber people 20 to 1, with an unusually critical eye.



Could it be true that "the inlets along the rugged southwestern coast of South Island rival Norway's fjords?"

Flying into Milford Sound in a light plane from Queenstown is indeed an exciting experience as the pilot weaves around 9,000-foot peaks. But the drop to sea level at the bottom of a 5,000-deep, cold waters of the sound ft. cliff is breathtaking. The walled by jagged peaks seasonally streaked by gushing waterfalls could fool even a Norwegian.

But how about the Southern Alps that run nearly the length of South Island? Are they "the most beautiful mountains in the world" as one veteran traveler unequivocally stated?

It's true that an artist would be hard put of improve upon the view of 12,349-foot Mt. Cook from the Hermitage, a famed resort in Mt. Cook National Park. And, when a ski plane landed me on Franz Josef Glacier I felt quite out of this world. But I have been to the Swiss, French and Italian Alps. And I have seen Himalayan glaciers. I must say the experiences are nearly equal.

Then there is the thermal area around Rotorua where geysers, boiling lakes, and bubbling mud were claimed to be even more interesting than those on Iceland. What makes this area of value, however, is its Polynesian connection.

It is here where the largest concentration of Maoris live and work. For centuries they have used geothermal heat for bathing and cooking. They still occupy villages here and invite guests to visit them. You can also watch Maori carvers at work in the Arts and Crafts Institute and enjoy a Maori concert nightly.

My friends were also right in praising the Waitomo Caves, "a wonderland under rolling green hills", or the picturesque dairy farms; or the open cattle ranges; or the hundreds of miles of "unspoiled, empty beaches."

In fact it is easier to list what New Zealand does not have than to continue describing its features:

- There are no big deserts or wastelands as in Australia's great "outback" country. Indeed there is no place where the visitor is more than 70 miles from the sea.
- No pollution. Even in the capital city of Wellington, the constant wind scatters any fumes.
- No crowds. When Christchurch was host for the Commonwealth Games, I think many New Zealanders were as interested in the crowds as the events. There is very little traffic and plenty of gasoline and all types of housing accommodations.

New Zealand's visitors increased last year nearly 19 per cent over the previous year. But there is still much room for tourism growth without spoiling the uncrowded atmosphere.

Besides displaying much of the "scenery of the world" while being free from some of its problems, this "little bit of England in the South Pacific" offers other inducements to visit it.

Being isolated, it has some unique inhabitants.

The nocturnal Kiwi, New Zealand's national bird, has only rudimentary wings and no tail. Its eggs are enormous compared with the size of its body.

About 75 per cent of New Zealand's native plants are also unique. They include some of the world's oldest plant forms.

New Zealand's smaller, islands are more oriented to the sea than North and South Islands.

Hilly and heavily forested Stewart Island, about 40 miles long and 20 miles wide, abounds in secluded bays and beaches with many colored sands and seashells. The island is also a bird sanctuary.

The Auckland Islands are uninhabited. Campbell Island in the sub-Antarctic was once farmed but now has only a manned weather and scientific station. The Snares, Antipodes, and Bounty Islands are sparsely settled.

On Chatham Island 500 miles east of South Island are both European and Maori settlers chiefly engaged in sheep farming and lobster and cod fishing.

Although I used the excellent air service of both New Zealand National Airways Corporation and Mount Cook Airlines, there is efficient coach and rail service throughout North and South Islands.

Travel Tips

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. — At one time you could have bought half of this desert town for a couple of thousand dollars. Which was the actual down payment made by Mrs. Nellie Coffman when she built the famous Desert Inn — long gone but not forgotten.

Southern Pacific owned a checkerboard of land: Every other square along the right of way. The government gave the alternate square miles back to the Indians thus making a hundred tribal members the richest Indians in America.

So we came down the other day (temperature 78 degrees) for the opening of the Canyon Hotel Racquet and Golf Resort. Price of this expensive layout — 500 rooms was not given. But costs $57 a day. The 18-hole golf course goes for $20 a round. Tennis at $10 an hour. And a horse will scrape you through the cactus for $5 an hour.

But there is reasonable accommodation in the resort town.

There are 35 golf courses. Bob Hope's favorite. President Eisenhower spent so much time here that one year he personally cooked 26 barbecue dinner parties.

The town's permanent residents are only 27,000.

It's green around here — they your millions of gallons of water on this desert. Night club and three restuarants in the canyon. Decorations must have cost a fortune. But it's so new they didn't have Kleenex in the bathrooms yet. Room service is swift. Bell boys have that old pro look They can size up the tip before you get your hand out of your pocket.

Hotel is operated by Americana, the hotel arm of American Airlines. And who do you think owns it? Mitsubishi, the giant Japanese conglomerate.

"We thought of moving to some desert community for my husband's health. . . ."

There's a whole bunch of desert but it's not all one big community. You can't just build a house anywhere — you have to have a water supply. And desert land doesn't come cheap. Even in the new communities like Lake Haven on the Colorado River.

There are advantages: Strict building controls, trict building controls. "Thou shalt not cast a shadow on your neighbor's dwelling" — keeps most houses down to one level. Sometimes you can get up to three. But desert sun is what you bought. And nobody can build between you and the sunshine.

McDonald's can't get a humburger stant into Palm Springs. Decor is too garish for this town. Colonel Sanders Kentucky Fried Chicken got in. But they wouldn't let him put up the revolving barrel sign.

And there's summer heat that goes over the 100 mark. Lots of people have the money, lots of people own houses here permanently. But only 27,000 can stick it through those summer temperatures.

Winter population runs 75,000 or better.

That doesn't mean you wouldn't like it year round. There seem to be people who have to live by the sea. People who are only happy in the mountains. And then there are the desert people — the mystery writer Erle Stanley Gardner was a desert person. He wrote some desert books — non-fiction. Read them.

Here is where you fall in love with whole continent of Asia

Copley News Service
By JOHN PHILIP SOUSA

PENANG, Malaysia — Here is where you fall in love with a whole continent.

Asia in miniature. A fascinating mixture of people and cultures. Temples, wats, pagodas, and churches. Unmatched natural beauty. Mile upon mile of golden beaches. Modern conveniences and English-speaking natives. Great shopping and superb food. And prices you don't believe — because they're so reasonable.

A mini-Orient indeed, but without the crowds, traffic and hassle often found on the Asian mainland.

First British settlement in the Strait of Malacca, this island lies a couple of miles off Malaysia's west coast about 175 miles from the country's capital, Kuala Lumpur.

Before coming here I had read that the Pearl of the Orient was one of the world's last unspoiled islands. After a few days of touring around I believe that it may well be that. But Penang has many dimensions, something I learned by meeting Eddie Phuah.

Island of Penang in Malaysia

My image of Penang as a dreamy and sleepy land of fishing villages, temples and deserted beaches was modified the moment I caught up with this busy businessman at one of his many offices.

Several phones added to the clutter on his large desk, our conversation interrupted every few minutes by a caller.

But Phuah, a gregarious Malaysian of Chinese ancestry whose properties include restaurants and travel agencies, never lost track of our chat. He briefed me on his beloved island before I set out to discover it on my own.

He told me about Penang's status as a free port, which accounts for the great shopping bargains as well as the thriving commercial enterprises, such as banks and shops, that give the main city of Georgetown its modern look and a touch of hustle.

I also learned that most of Malaysia's tin and rubber is shipped all over the world from Georgetown's busy but small harbor.

But just as Eddie Phuah is one of the few among the 770,000 of Penang's inhabitants one could describe as a hurried businessman, the mini-bustle of the predominantly Chinese downtown area is but one face, and a small one at that, of the island.

Most Penangites live in the quiet countryside, many work in rice fields and rubber plantations; quite a few harvest the riches from an incredibly generous sea, and others make a living in the budding tourism industry.

The bulk of the 110-square-mile island is what you see minutes from the busy Chinatown section of Georgetown: neat rice fields, swaying palms reacting to ever-present and refreshing breezes, secluded villages, hills wrapped with thick jungle trees, those great uncrowded beaches.

There's much to see in Penang and you can "do" the island in a day, but it's worth spending several.

In Georgetown — which hardly any one calls by that name, but rather Penang — you get around by cab, on foot or aboard a rickshaw; the latter a sort of bicycle with a two-seat, two-wheel cart up front that is possibly the best way to get around town.

Bus tours, rental cars and chauffeured automobiles will take you to the glorious countryside. So as to concentrate on the scenery, I used the latter. The aging but smooth-running Mercedes and its young driver were provided by Lucky Tours and Travel Service, one of Eddie Phuah's operations.

These are some of the sights that caught my eye.

No doubt the most impressive of all after the island's natural beauty was Kek Lok Si, one of the largest Chinese Buddhist temples in Southeast Asia.

Built on a hill that overlooks Georgetown, it cover 30 acres of land. It has tortoise and fish ponds in the large gardens. Granite steps lead to the temple and to the monumental seven-tiered Pagoda of A Million Buddhas, no doubt Penang's most famous landmark.

The 100-foot-tall pagoda is rather unique: the octagonal base is Chinese in style, the middle part is Thai, and the elaborate top section is Burmese.

On Acheen Street is the Malay Mosque whose Egyptian minaret contrasts sharply with the Indian minaret of the Kapitan Keling Mosque a few blocks away.

There are lots of Chinese temples around here — along with Thai wats, Anglican churches, Burmese shrines and the Malay and India mosques — but the most interesting to visitors is the Temple of Azure Cloud, or Snake Temple.

Scores of the slithery things curl on joss stick stands, hang on fixtures and coil around table legs, altars, vases and plants. Burning incense keeps them drugged enough to be harmless during the day when visitors abound; at night they wake up and fee on eggs.

Penang's Botanical Garden is a treat if you like manicured lawns ringed by jungle-like hills, monkeys by the hundreds, and an opportunity to meet the friendly Penangites.

The tramway ride to the top of 2,723-foot Penang Hill by funicular railway should be in your agenda. Not much to see going up, but the view from the summit is great.

I also visited the island's two batik printing factories.

At one the traditional block and wax method is used, at the other the intricate printing is done by silk screening.

There are a number of hotels spanning the gamut of style and price. You can get Spartan but neat room in one of several Chinese hotels in downtown Georgetown for under $4, or you can splurge and park yourself in one of the plush resorts on the beach where the daily tab averages $20.

It's easy to get here, by jet from Kuala Lumpur or Bangkok or by train from either city to Butterworth on the Malaysian mainland opposite Penang.

What's for from easy is to leave.

Flogging an Issue

SINGAPORE (NYT) — A lively crime-punishment debate is going on here over the controversial and widespread practice of flogging prisoners in addition to their sentences.

The debate was prompted by a separate but related issue. Two months ago a government study committee recommended that individual teachers once again be allowed to cane students who misbehave.

Though the government eventually rejected the proposal, the issue put many in mind of the practice of prison flogging. The question — Should convicted criminals be flogged? — has recently been aired by discussion groups, in social gatherings and by newspaper columnists, editorial writers and writers of letters to the editor.

The practice of beating prisoners bloody is not only common in Singapore but is on the increase at a time when most other nations have long since either dropped such punishment or softened it considerably. It is a legacy of the days when this island at the tip of the Malay Peninsula was ruled by the British, who no longer use the punishment.

The flogging, done with a flexible cane four feet long and a half an inch thick, is usually referred to as caning.

Some months ago the government expanded both the range of crimes for which it could be ordered and the number of strokes that could be administered.

Caning had been limited to crimes involving violence; now the courts can mete it out for such crimes as extortion and even vandalism.

The maximum is 24 strokes, and sentences of 20 strokes are not uncommon, although few people remain conscious for more than 10 or 12.

Singapore, facing a crime rate that is rising in tandem with the growing prosperity of its 2.2 million people, has a discipline-oriented Government that believes caning is a deterrent, though there is no strong statistical or sociological evidence one way or the other. The practice seems to have wide public support.

The centrepiece of the debate — which made it clear that the Government had no intention of modifying its policy — was a special news conference by the Director of Prisons, Quek Shi Lei. Quek, whose description of caning and its deterrent rationale was carried prominently and in graphic detail in the next morning's newspapers — said four specially trained prison officers, all robust and all holding high grades in the martial arts, did the flogging.

During the flogging, he went on, because of the whip-like action of the cane, the skin at the point of contact is split, and after three strokes the prisoner's buttocks are "covered with blood." The strokes are administered at intervals of about 30 seconds.

Fares do not include $2.00 Frankfurt airport departure tax.

Balance of your fare is due at least 60 days before departure.

CANCELLATION
In the event you have to cancel your flight booking any time prior to departure, you automatically forfeit your $50 deposit. Any balance of the fare which has been paid will be refunded by Intervac.

For an additional $6 per passenger, you can purchase Intervac's CHARTER FARE PROTECTION INSURANCE which protects you under most circumstances if your travel plans are necessarily and unavoidably cancelled due to causes beyond your control. The INTERVAC CHARTER FARE PROTECTION INSURANCE will refund the $50 cancellation charge, and in addition will ensure your travel home (point of departure) if you are unable to return to Canada due to sickness; injury or death.

All flights depart from, and return to, Vancouver International Airport. Arrivals and departures in Britain and Europe are at Gatwick (London), Prestwick, Schiphol (Amsterdam), and Frankfurt Main airports, depending on destination.

Tickets are valid only for flights purchased and cannot be exchanged for other flights.

Infants under 2 carried free of charge.

An additional $5 to cover the Canadian Transportation Tax must be paid at the time of final payment.

All flights governed by the Advance Booking Charter provisions of the Canadian Transport Commission, and approved by the Air Transport Committee.

Eating out in Peking

Simple lunch grows to sumptuous repast

By JOHN BURNS
Copyright 1975 The Globe and Mail

PEKING — It was to have been a simple beer-and-noodles lunch, the way the Chinese man-in-the-street would have it. The four of us, three Americans and a Canadian, sat at a table near the pot-bellied stove and asked the waitress for the standard fare. She smiled, and scurried away to bring us what we hoped would be the regular 35-cent meal.

The first sign that we weren't going to get the common man's treatment was the exodus of the other patrons. We had arrived a little late, but there was something a little too purposeful about the way the crowd of diners suddenly dwindled. Apparently, the word was out that the foreigners were to be left to eat in isolation.

Even as we were puzzling over the evacuation, the delay in serving the food suggested that something more substantial than a bowl of noodle was under preparation. After half an hour we knew we were in for a solid meal, but nothing in our experience had prepared us for the sumptuous repast that followed.

First came a cold plate, followed by individual dishes of sweet and sour pork, beef and sliced onions, steamed cabbage and mushrooms. These led on to a stream of more exotic cuisine — steamed Mandarin fish, creamed abalone, chicken and cashew nuts, bean curd in a peppery ginger sauce, baked apple in hot toffee.

Altogether, for nine courses and an abundant flow of hot yellow wine, the bill came to the equivalent of $8.90. For not quite $2.25 each, we had had a feast in the best traditions of Chinese cuisine, cooked without notice by chefs whose stock-in-trade is the common man's 25-cent bowl of noodles.

Eating out in Peking is an experience, and not only for the cuisine. At least a dozen first-class restaurants in the city cater to foreigners on a regular basis, serving exquisite food in private rooms, but it is not so much in these as in the neighbourhood eateries, where Chinese and foreigner can sit down together, that the real China is to be seen.

As the experience in the noodles restaurant suggested, eating with the common man is not always easy. It is a reflex as old as China itself to keep foreigners away from the mainstream of Chinese life, and the communists have continued and reinforced the tradition — to the point of discouraging attempts by foreigners to eat a commoner's meal.

Old hands argue that this reflexive tendency to segregate foreigners has a practical rather than political root, and in th case of restaurants they may be right. The Chinese concern, say the old hands, is that foireigners should enjoy the best of Chinese hospitality and not grub in with the locals in conditions inferior to those they are accustomed to at home.

Certainly, there is little that even the most effete Westerner could complain about in the special, foreigners-only sections of the de luxe restaurants. The rooms are clean and centrally heated, with landscapes on the wall and clean linen on the tables — privileged sanctuaries where nobody's sensibilities are likely to be offended.

By contrast, neighbourhood restaurants are China as it really is. Called "masses" restaurants by foreigners, in mock-solemn recognition of the repeated references in Chinese propaganda to "the broad masses of the people," they are decidedly humble — and, for a Westerner eager to learn how the Chinese really live, utterly intriguing.

They are commonly found down narrow sidestreets and hutungs, the alleyways that knit large sections of the city together. Frequently there is nothing outside to indicate there is a restaurant within, and in the winter, when the windows are opaque with steam, a visitor has to poke his head inside to be sure he has found what he's after.

It is usually a one-storey affair, with a stone-flagged floor crowded with plain wooden tables and chairs. There may be an inscription or two from Chairman Mao's writings on the walls, but otherwise the only adornment is likely to be a slate listing the day's fare — and the prices, of course, there being no more penny-conscious diner than the Chinese.

Foreigners have only to step in the door to attract every pair of eyes in the place. While Chinese diners crane their necks for a better view, a waiter or waitress hurries forward, often with a suggestion that the "foreign friends" take their patronage somewhere "more convenient" — meaning a de luxe restaurant with private rooms a little further down the street.

If the visitors stand their ground, insisting that the simplicity of the place is exactly what they want, a colloquy ensues between the waiter and the "responsible member," or manager. Since it is the nature of the Chinese to avoid needless confrontation, the result of the discussion is almost always acquiescence.

The foreigners' persistence can have unintended consequences, for it is the Chinese fashion on such occasions to clear a whole table for the visitors, notwithstanding the availability of seats at tables already occupied by Chinese. Diners already at the table are peremptorily ejected, with their bowls and dishes and chopsticks, and the mortified foreigners seated in their place.

Getting seated is sometimes only half the battle. Next, the waiter may suggest that the visitors order something a little more substantial than the commonplace fare posted on the slate. Even if this initiative is discouraged, the waiter is likely to insist on other special touches — a table cloth, perhaps, or at least an ostentatious swabbing down of the table.

If, looking around, visitors see an ambiance that would scarcely pass muster with Cecil Beaton — grubby floors, pools of beer and food scraps sticking to the tables, walls that could do with a fresh whitewash — they will rarely have any complaints about the cuisine. Commonplace it may be, but it is also invariably piping hot, well cooked and tasty.

One of the best "masses" meals, ideal for the bitter Peking winter, is a Mongolian hotpot. This is a cook-it-yourself dish, employing a charcoal-fired cauldron of boiling water into which the diner slips slivers of raw mutton and fresh cabbage. Done to taste, dipped in a spicy brown sauce and folded inside a sesame-seed bun, it is delicious.

Another favorite of the common man is a plate of chiao tzu, flour-wrapped dumplings of beef or pork spiced with chives. Dipped in soya sauce, they are eaten by the dozen, 40 or 50 at a sitting being not uncommon among the Chinese. This is probably the most popular of all dishes among the people of North China, and one off the cheapest.

Whereas a dinner in one of the city's de luxe restaurants, in a private room, can run anywhere from $4 to $25 per person, a hotpot with a couple of side dishes and beer in a neighbourhood restaurant costs about 75 cents. Chiao tzu come even cheaper, a plate of 50 and a jug of Peking's excellent draught beer running about 45 cents.

Perhaps the most intriguing of all the "masses" restaurants in the city are the 24-hour establishments, mostly found near large factories and on major roads into the city from the countryside. Always crowded, even in the small hours; they offer a perspective on the working man's China that is as refreshing as the picture painted in the propaganda magazines is turgid.

GARDENING

Better Get Ready Now . . . Celsius Nearing

The first metric change to affect home gardeners will likely be temperatures, if Canada follows the pattern set by other countries which adopted the metric system over the past ten years.

Few of us realize how frequently weather, particularly any changes in temperature, enters into conversation with friends and strangers during the course of a day.

Temperature plays an important part in home gardening. It determines whether seeds will germinate indoors or outdoors; the time for sowing seeds; the rate of growth of both seedlings and the resulting plants; the time at which plants will flower, fruit, or mature; when to harvest, and not least by any means, the physical comfort of the gardener as he pursues his hobby.

It is to be hoped that Canada will make a clean break when the Celsius scale is adopted, without any further references to Fahrenheit.

To assist the man-in-the-street, the English weather office has been giving Fahrenheit comparisons. A survey taken after five years (one-tion period) revealed 90 per cent of the population still ignores Celsius and shows no inclination to change as long as comparisons are available.

This is a clear case of misplaced sympathy prolonging agony.

There are four temperature scales in use now, Approximate Absolute (AA), Celsius (C), Fahrenheit (F), and Reaumur (R), yet we are quite content to know the temperature in degs. F.

Why should we suddenly require the temperature in two scales in order to carry on a reasonable conversation?

It is likely that Celsius thermometers will be just as scarce as metre rules and gram weights are at the present time, therefore each of us will have to adapt our present thermometers.

Were all thermometers the same length containing the same kind of fluid, it would be a simple matter to produce a scale that could be cut out and pasted on any instrument. Since this is not practical, each conversion scale must be made to suit the given instrument.

Fortunately, we do not have to worry about accuracy on the kind of thermometers found in homes and greenhouses.

Few are anywhere near correct over the entire scale, discrepancies of 5 to 10 degs. being common on those mass-produced for store sales and advertising give-aways.

So let's forget about accuracy and the fact we cannot draw a straight line (these are only lame excuses anyway) and start making a Celsius scale.

The thermometer in the drawing has the Fahrenheit scale on the left side and the Celsius scale on the right.

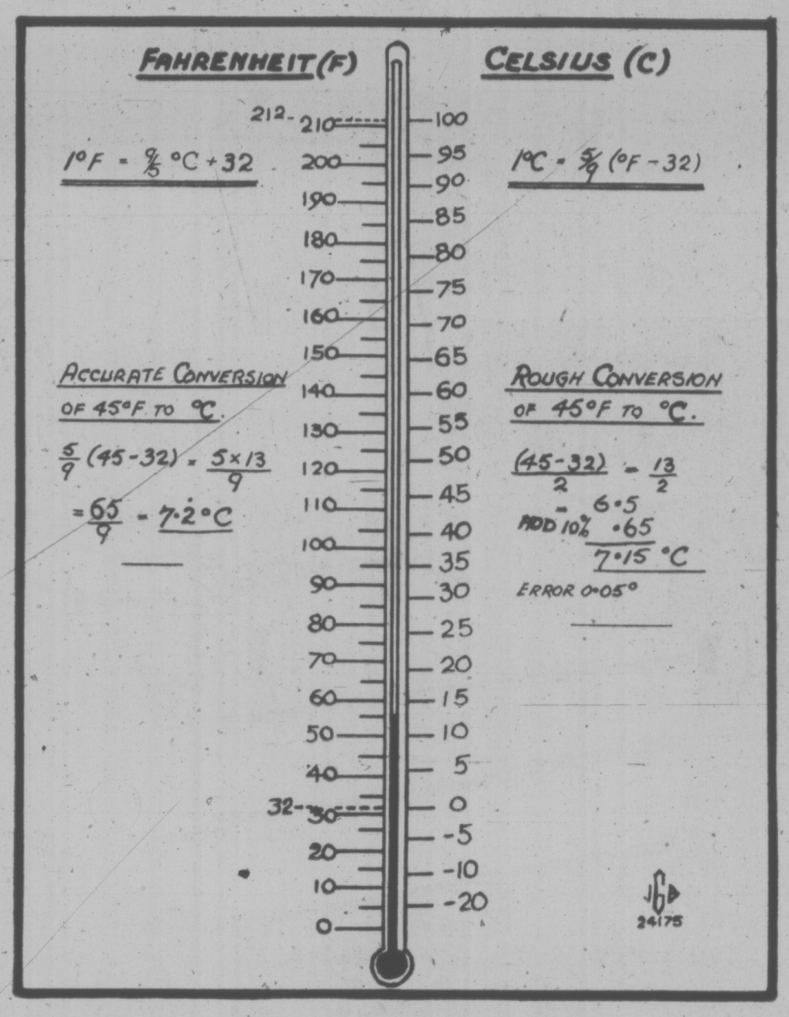
The first thing we notice is 180 divisions on the F. side and 100 divisions on the C. side between the freezing and boiling points of water. 100 over 180 reduces to 5 over 9, and that is our conversion factor.

Next, we note that 50 degs. F is exactly the same as 10 degs. C, and 95 degs. F is right opposite 35 degs. C. So we cut a piece of stiff paper or thin cardboard the length of our thermometer scale and mark on it these two points.

The space between these two marks is then divided into five equal divisions, and the distance between any two divisions used to set out the rest of the scale.

Number the divisions as in the drawing, starting from the 32 deg. F mark which is zero Celsius. The divisions below zero are marked minus (-). Each division is 5 degs.

The next line that registers exactly is 140 degs. F and 60 degs. C, but most household thermometers range only from 20 to 110.



When accurate conversions are necessary, use the equation on the left side of the drawing. For the cook, a 350-degree oven is converted in the same way.

The more simple way, and accurate enough for most purposes, is the rough conversion shown on the right side of the drawing. Just take the number of degs. F, subtract 32, divide by 2 and add 10 per cent for error.

By this method, an oven temperature of 425 degs. F converts to 216 degs. C, an error of 4 degs. C.

Most of us can make a reasonable estimate of prevailing temperatures indoors and out, and we shall continue to do so, but the expression of our reactions will be made in different figures.

As soon as we become accustomed to linking frost with zero, a cool day with 5, a warm day with 15, house temperature with 20, a hot day with 25, hot water with 50 to 55, and boiling water with 100, we shall be over the hump.

Minimum growing temperature will be 5 degs., optimum growing temp. 20 degs. Indoor seed germinating 20, growing the seedlings indoors 10, hardening the seedlings 5, shading seedlings from 15 to 35.

Celsius thermometers will be read in even degrees as we do now with F, so the decimal point and the decimal fractions now present in our conversions will disappear.

Various aids to assist Canadians in the changeover are available from: Metric Commission, Box 4000, Ottawa, K1s 5G8.

These include booklets, cubes explaining grams and litres, measuring rules (cardboard), and a large wall poster with the Celsius thermometer related to things you will do at given temperatures.

WORK FOR WEEK

Check dahlia tubers in storage; also gladiolus corms and other fleshy rooted plants being stored for winter. Discard any having signs of rot, for they will rapidly infect others as their growth period becomes advanced in February.

If you have a new garden which will be bare of spring flowers, prepare a patch of soil in a sunny spot and plant anemone tubers for gorgeous, long-lasting colors by early May. The soil must be well drained so that it will quickly warm to encourage growth.

Sover one root of rhubarb with dry leaves, strawy manure, or loose compost to encourage early stalks to grow. A wood box or open-ended barrel will do the job too, if heaped up around the outside with soil to keep out frost at ground level.

Sow mustard and cress every two weeks indoors or in warm greenhouse. Also lettuce and leeks for later planting indoors.

Pick out tomato seedlings sown in January, into small pots.

LOCKOUT

Some Greater Victoria residents have asked: "Why lock out unions that aren't on strike?"

Seven local governments have united in our contract bargaining with Locals of the Canadian Union of Public Employees. We have co-ordinated in response to co-ordination by the unions.

In the past, the standard C.U.P.E. management tactic has been to focus pressure on one employer, thus reaching an expensive settlement which becomes the pattern for other employers. As well, one striking union can be financially supported by others still at work.

We have decided we won't be divided and conquered any longer. That's why we have said: "If any union negotiating with us strikes, then we will lock out all other unions which have not reached agreements."

We know that our workers deserve raises in 1975. Our united position is intended to create fair settlements: fair to employees and fair to taxpayers generally.

Potential for Honky-Tonk Area Worries Pacific Rim Park Men

UCLUELET—If not carefully planned, future development of private and public-owned lands adjacent to Pacific Rim National Park could cheapen this popular west coast recreational area.

This is the opinion of planners, mayors and regional district officers worried by mistakes of the past and faced with mounting pressures to develop the approaches to the park outside the villages of Ucluelet and Tofino.

Ucluelet Mayor Bill Russell who has fought for the orderly development of the unorganized district since the park was established, says the potential for "honky-tonk" development already exist.

He points to the start of ribbon development and fringe development in areas adjacent to the park.

This was one of the sights which surprised some senior federal parks officials who visited Long Beach to discuss development plans for Pacific Rim National Park.

With a million or more people expected to visit the park in the not too distant future, the problem is a serious one for the two west coast communities of Tofino and Ucluelet, already beset with water, sewage and garbage problems.

Correcting the mistakes may prove to be costly and beyond the financial means of the regional district and villages.

The mistakes all hark back to the past.

It first started when the Social Credit government approved the establishment of a federal national park at Long Beach.

The move was commendable, but the government gave no thought to planning before or after the event and what effect the park would have on residents of the neighboring villages. Even if it had wanted to, the understaffed government services had, neither the planners, nor the skills to undertake the necessary studies.

The government's second mistake was to sell public lands in the unorganized areas outside the park without consulting the regional district or villages.

The way was now open for fringe and ribbon developments.

And lastly, the government built a paved highway from Alberni to the park to replace a logging road used by visitors in the sixties.

The effect was to attract thousands of additional people to the area, taxing the facilities and services of Tofino and Ucluelet, including those of the national park.

The park was not ready to cope with a large influx of people. It was engaged in buying up private holdings within park boundaries, preparing a master plan for the 33,000-acre area and building up its staff.

since then, the regional district has imposed strict controls on the unorganized district, but as one councillor said regional boards change and so do governments.

If the controls are ever relaxed, hodge-podge development along the approaches to the park is sure to follow.

A SPECIAL MADNESS

TOFINO — Have you ever been afflicted by a malady known as "West Coast Madness?"

Residents of this village say the madness exists, but only afflicts people who visit Long Beach in Pacific Rim National Park or adjacent west coast areas.

Bert Braiden, who is developing a camping complex to eventually contain 1,000 sites, says some people seem to go beserk when they come within sight and sound of the open Pacific.

"I'm sure this wilderness coast does something to some people," he said. "They get out of their trailers or campers and holler and throw their arms around. Some literally go wild when they reach the beach."

But sociologist Daniel Koenig of the University of British Columbia, says the behavior of some people in the wilderness areas has nothing to do with the environment.

"They are pre-conditioned to act that way," he explained. "That is they want freedom and when they have reached their objective they let go."

Strict Controls For Travel Firms

Legislation placing strict controls on travel agencies and tour operators in B.C. will be introduced in the spring session of the legislature

Consumer Services Minister Phyllis Young said Friday the legislation, now being prepared by her department in conjunction with the representatives of the travel industry, will undoubtedly include mandatory licensing of all tour operations and travel agencies.

With licensing it would be almost impossible to control the industry, she said.

Details of the legislation are still being discussed, she said, but agencies will likely be required to place money in trust funds each year to protect consumers in case of bankruptcy or other financial difficulties.

Young said reputable travel agencies want to be included in legislation because controls are necessary to protect legitimate tours, now being jeopardized by the publicity given tours in difficulty.

The recent troubles of Travellers International, which went bankrupt in December, and AirClub International, which ran into difficulties with U.S. federal aviation authorities, prompted the B.C. government to draft new legislation, said Young.

B.C. is looking closely at new legislation in Ontario designed to protect consumers by controlling the travel industry, said Young, and that legislation may be the model for B.C.'s new licensing and registration.

PCs Push Pension Boosts

OTTAWA (CP) — The Progressive Conservatives launched a concerted effort Friday to improve the lot of old age pensioners, convincing the government to yield ground on at least one point.

Bud Cullen, parliamentary secretary for finance, said Friday the government will adopt a change advocated by George Whittaker (PC-Okanagan-Boundary). It will make pensions available to some armed forces veterans who do not qualify.

A small number of veterans are prevented from collecting pension benefits at 65 because of residency requirements.

All persons who have lived in Canada for the 10 years preceding their 65th birthday qualify automatically. But different regulations apply to those who have spent lengthy periods out of the country. In some cases' veterans are affected.

There is no exemption for time spent outside Canada for armed forces service.

Whittaker argued that this is discriminatory and Cullen agreed.

Legislation to correct this defect will be introduced, hopefully before the current session of Parliament ends in June, he said.

He said only a small number of veterans will be affected by the change.

Meanwhile, Don Munro (PC-Esquimalt-Saanich) urged that income and sales taxes be abolished for all senior citizens in an effort to restore public faith in saving.

Inflation has undermined the incentive to save and high government spending has diminished the importance of putting away money for retirement years, he argued.

He said his proposal would extend to the income pensioners get from capital gains. Such a system would reduce "government-forced dependency on everyone."

Ford Budget $50 Billion In the Red

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford announced today he will submit a $349 billion federal budget with a planned deficit of $52 billion for the 1976 fiscal year. He appealed to Congress "to walk the extra mile with me" to restore the nation's economic health.

The budget will be officially submitted to Congress Monday.

"It is a big budget, calling for expenditures of $349 billion —almost a billion dollars a day during the year starting next July 1," Ford said.

Ford disclosed the basic figures today along with a strong defence of his decisions at an otherwise off-the-record news briefing by administration officials at the state department.

"It will result in a large deficit for the year—$52 billion — and this deficit, large as it is, would increase by another $17 billion to nearly $70 billion if the Congress does not agree to all of the reductions I have requested in this budget."

Ford noted that the the government already is anticipating red ink spending of about $30 billion in the current fiscal year.

"I do not like to see deficits of this size" and "I know most Americans agree" with his feelings, the president said.

But he added: "I am resolved to take those steps that will make such deficits unnecessary in the future. That requires, most of all, restoration of a vigorous economy in this country, but we must be realistic."

Ford said that "in times like these" it is necessary to increase spending for aid to the unemployed while trying to generate "a measured amount of additional stimulus" to the economy through a tax reduction and he said his budget, along with his proposals for energy conservation, would do that.

"It is equally essential that we not rekindle the fires of inflation," he said.

"I, of course, will work very closely with the Congress in all of these matters. I will walk the extra mile and give all of my strength to getting the national economy in shape.

ON-THE-SPOT conference was held early today near Johnson Street Bridge between Jim Walker, right, president of striking city outside workers union, and members of Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers Union. Walker said CP Rail was given a pass to take seven empty boxcars across bridge, as they constituted a fire hazard sitting in the yard, but railway workers were concerned the action would constitute crossing a picket line. Everything was worked out, Walker said, and train was waved across the bridge by a city engineer at 10:30 a.m. (John McKay photo)

CLEANED OUT

VANCOUVER (CP) — A 45-year-old Calgary man was cleaned out of $600 Thursday by two women who offered to take a bath with him.

The victim told police he met the women in a beer parlor and all three returned to his hotel room.

The women suggested they take a communal bath, he said, so he undressed and went into the bathroom to fill the tub. The women said they would join him after a minute.

A few seconds later, he found the door locked. When he got out, his pants pockets were empty along with his wallet, which had contained $600.

Unconscious Girl Found

Colwood RCMP are asking help from the public in identifying a girl found unconscious beside the Trans-Canada Highway near Millstream Friday evening.

The girl, thought to be 16 to 20 years old, remains unconscious and in poor condition at Victoria General Hospital today—with probable head injuries.

Const. Wendal Milne of the general investigation squad based at Colwood said the girl was spotted lying beside the highway by a passing motorist about 6 p.m. Friday.

She is described as five feet two inches tall, of slim build, with blue eyes and light brown hair past her shoulders. She was wearing green slacks, a green car coat with hood and had a silver signet ring with the letter S scratched on it.

Police asked that anyone able to assist identifying her call Colwood RCMP at 388-3123 or 388-3371.

Gilmour Out In School Row

Saanich and the Greater Victoria School Board will be in a legal position early next week to lock out employees, after government mediator Clark Gilmour withdrew from both disputes Friday.

Gilmour filed his report on mediation efforts between the school board and the 278 maintenance workers, members of Local 382 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, after a 20-minute negotiation meeting Friday afternoon.

School board spokesman Bill Stavdal said Gilmour had been asked to withdraw by CUPE negotiators earlier this week, but had decided to stay on the job until Friday.

Stavdal said the board will be in a legal lockout position by Monday or Tuesday. Inside school board workers are still involved in mediation and another meeting with negotiators and Gilmour is scheduled for Monday.

Saanich asked Gilmour to withdraw from the municipality's dispute with the 375 members of CUPE Local 374 after a meeting Friday produced no results.

Local 374 president Jim Brett said the union is prepared for a lockout which could come Tuesday or Wednesday.

He said the union proposed at the Friday meeting that workers be given parity with people doing similar jobs in Victoria's private sector, but the municipality rejected the proposal.

"It seems this route (lockout) was laid down some time ago and we have been able to do nothing to offset it," Brett said.

The Saanich union has not yet taken a strike vote, and Brett said there are no immediate plans to do so.

Gilmour's withdrawal from the Saanich and school board maintenance staff disputes, leaves only Esquimalt, Sidney and the school board's inside workers still involved in mediation efforts.

IRA Raids Resume

BELFAST (UPI) — The British army, abandoning hope of a cease-fire in Ulster, today launched its toughest security clamp-down in two months with a series of predawn raids on Irish Republican Army strongholds.

The army said six suspects were seized in the raids which came less than 12 hours after IRA ambushers shot and killed a policeman and injured another in a machine-gun attack at Donaghmore, 35 miles west of Belfast.

British army officials said the security raids on Belfasts new lodge area, a centre of the Provisional wing of the outlawed IRA, aimed at countering a further escalation of violence.

ONLY HIS PRAISE CROSSED PICKETS

Friday was the last working day of Robert Davidson, chief administrative officer of the Victoria provincial court. He retired after 35 years as a Victoria policeman, court officer and court clerk.

His longtime friend and working companion Judge William Ostler made a special point of announcing Davidson's departure at the start of the court session on Friday.

But Davidson wasn't there to hear the kind words and praises for a job well done. A member of the B.C. Government Employees Union, he would not cross the picket line.

Ostler said Davidson's contributions to the court system as it has developed and grown over the years has "excited the admiration of us all".

The government has made no announcement yet on who will replace Davidson.

Barrett Rips Into Oil Firms

CALGARY (CP) Premier Dave Barrett told a cheering audience here that Canadians can develop their own natural resources without the help of multi-national corporations.

Barrett, who was interrupted 41 times by applause and four standing ovations, told more than 1,000 people at the Alberta New Democratic Party convention that Alberta and Canada should tell Syncrude and other oil companies to "get out of the oil sands."

The standing-room only crowd, which spilled out of the main convention room at the Palliser Hotel and into the lobby, was one of the most enthusiastic seen by the B.C. premier since his upset election win two and a half years ago.

He ripped into multi-national oil companies for price gouging and said oil companies should not be able to control 90 per cent of Canada's non-renewable resources.

The companies are guilty of making extravagant profits at the expense of consumers, he said, citing profit reports for three major companies which showed massive increases in net earnings since 1972.

He said he was "embarrasses" by television reports that federal energy minister Donald Macdonald was "waiting by the telephone for a call from the oil companies to see if they would do Canada a favor and develop the oil sands."

"It's our country, our oil, and they're borrowing money, our money, from Canadian banks to pay for it.

"Let us all, all the provinces, tiny Prince Edward Island, friendly British Columbia, Happy Alberta, let us all develop the oil sands.

"Let's do it together—let's do it ourselves."

He repeated that British Columbia would join any federal policy which would put all energy resources in the hands of public Crown corporations.

But, in an inberview following his speech, Barrett also repeated earlier statements that British Columbia would not participate in the Syncrude consortium as it presently stands because of the involvement by oil companies.

5 Arrested

MONTREAL (CP) — Five persons were arrested Friday in connection with the Jan. 21 deaths of 13 persons at a north-east district night club, a police spokesman said.

"I won't talk about it," the spokesman said. "The five have been caught. The case is closed. The killings have been resolved and you will learn all about it at the inquest."

'Slasher' Toll 9

Clyde Hay, 34, an employee of the National Cash Register Co., was killed late Thursday or early Friday in an old apartment house in a modest Hollywood neighborhood, police said.

Iran Aids Airlines

WASHINGTON (WP) — Iran is close to an agreement to make a $300 million investment in Pan American World Airways and has bought six Boeing 747 jumbo jets from Trans World Airlines. Iran's two moves, if the Pan Am agreement is approved, would vault it into a major position in world civil aviation and would provide badly needed cash to the two financially troubled airlines.

Spill Fine $500

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Norwegian bulk carrier, the Hoegh Miranda, was fined $500 Thursday for spilling 135 gallons of bunker oil into Burrard Inlet.

Japanese City Stoically Awaits Predicted Quake

KAWASAKI, Japan (WP) — The citizens of this industrial city were officially informed Friday night that they are living at the centre of a likely earthquake zone with disastrous possibilities. They took the explanations calmly, almost stoically, and prepared to go about their business until the predictions come true or are proven wrong.

The unprecedented turnout of about 2,000 people in the city auditorium was evidence of Kawasaki's concern. Many people sat on the edge of their chairs as an earthquake scientist and city officials explained the prospects and countermeasures. But there was little emotion, and no sign that any of the residents are planning to pull up stakes and move elsewhere.

Kawasaki is a densely populated industrial and bedroom city sandwiched between Tokyo and Yokohama. Its population has quadrupled in the postwar era to a total of 1 million people crowded into small apartments and tiny houses amid the belching smokestacks of oil refineries and other heavy industrial works.

A few months ago a technical survey of National Highway 15 — the famed old Tokaido Road immortalized by the woodblock prints of Hiroshige — discovered the strange fact that parts of the area have risen almost two inches in the past four years. Scientists attributed this bulge to pressures beneath the earth. Combined with historical evidence and other factors, the government's earthquake is likely to hit the area within a year or two, with Kawasaki city as its centre.

The council announced its findings late last month in an effort to warn the citizenry and prevent the spread of rumors. The people of Kawasaki were taken aback by the news and began calling, writing and stopping by city hall, police and fire stations and other municipal offices asking for information and advice.

The city's response was to organize a week-long series of "earthquake information rallies," the largest and most important of which took place in the city auditorium Friday night. Introduced by a properly bowing ward chief who referred to the "big shock" which everyone had suffered, the evening featured explanations by Prof. Hiroshi Takahashi of the earthquake forecast council, a question-and-answer session with the chiefs of city departments and a sometimes-grisly 30-minute film featuring previous disasters which have struck earthquake-prone Japan.

The professor explained the basis for the council's prediction, and said the chances seemed good that the quake will register not more than 4 or 5 on the Japanese scale of 7.

The tonfa used to be a tool for pounding grain . . .

So did the nunchaku . . . but not any longer

Stars and Sticks

Kung Fu Freaks Are Latching On to Deadly Karate Weapons

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

Shuriken stars and nunchaku sticks used to only mean something to Karate experts.

Then along came the Kung Fu television series and the Bruce Lee movies.

Now they are a growing and unrestricted fad among young people. Police are becoming worried. With good reason.

Shurikens are evil little star-shaped piece of pressed metal with eight points each about three inches long. One police officer described the lethal star as having the potential of eight throwing knives.

And nunchakus are two sticks about 14 inches long connected at one end by a four-inch length of chain or twine. With a little bit of practice an adroit swing can inflict serious injury or death.

Both are weapons used in Karate exercises.

But that's not what is worrying police.

It's the discovery in recent months that more and more young people are carrying the weapons — for protection, for intimidation, or simply because it's the in-thing.

"To them it's a fad," a member of the Vancouver police Youth detail said. "However, a lot don't realize just how dangerous these weapons are.

"A shuriken star for example can be tossed into a wall from a distance of 20 feet with ease. Imagine what it could do if aimed at someone's forehead.

"And the nuchaku sticks . . . with a little practice they're deadly."

He said it doesn't take long to be proficient.

"It only takes a couple of hours training."

The weapons are readily available, he said. Shurikens can be bought for $3.50 each at a Karate store on East Hastings, but are not sold here.

Nunchakus sell here for about $7, but more often if the person is bent on using it for an illegitimate purpose he'll make a pair himself.

One set seized in Victoria consisted of two broom handles wrapped with electician's tape and connected by a piece of link chain. The chain was secured to the end of each stick by a nail twisted over.

It is difficult to assess just how widespread the weapons are being used. They first started appear in youth gangs in the Lower Mainland three or four months ago.

One Victoria policeman said he had already confiscated three sets of sticks from young people checked on the street.

There is one case before the courts here as well as four in Vancouver involving youths charged with possession of a dangerous weapon after police found nunchaku sticks on them.

The court will determine if there was a dangerous purpose in the motive for carrying them.

There is no question they are dangerous.

Victoria karate expert Lindon Bateson is the first to agree to that but adds "it still depends largely on the person using it."

He teaches the nunchaku stick's correct use — as an accoutrement to a set of pre-arranged movements or kata.

The sticks are popular with the younger crowd, he said, mainly because of the impact of Kung Fu theme movies. He sells wooden as well as plastic "safety" sets, but only to his students.

He shuns shuriken stars.

"I don't think there is anything to learn from using them . . . it's as simple as throwing a rock."

The stars, he said, were once used by the ninja or samuri spies as a weapon to kill silently and swiftly.

However, he employs most other karate weapons, such as the tonfa, a twirling stick with a short perpendicular handle, and the kama, a scythe-like instrument.

Ironically, most of the karate weapons have a peaceful origin.

The nunchaku was a tool for pounding grain or rice as was the tonfa, while the kama was a short farmer's scythe, originally with a metal crescent-shaped blade.

They were first used as weapons in Okinawa in the early 1400s after the Japanese warlords had disallowed the Okinawans from arming themselves.

Jubilee Pharmacist Wins National Award

A young pharmacist at Royal Jubilee Hospital has won a $500 award in a national competition for her thesis on development of a drug-monitoring program right in the wards of the hospital.

Hannah Bradley, 24, who worked on the project while she was completing a pharmacy residency at the hospital last year, will go to Toronto next week to receive the Bristol Award at a meeting of the Canadian Society of Hospital Pharmacists.

What is called "clinical pharmacy" has staff pharmacists moving out of the hospital pharmacy and into some patient wards to watch for potentially incompatible drug combinations being prescribed.

There were 69,433 drug prescriptions dispensed at Jubilee last year. There are about 2,300 strengths and dosage forms of drugs available in the hospital pharmacy and new drugs are appearing all the time. So the pharmacists are actively making their special knowledge in the field available to doctors.

A similar clinical pharmacy program has also been started at Victoria General Hospital.

A two-month pilot project at Jubilee had pharmacists monitoring therapy given all patients in a 29-bed men's medical ward. They provided doctors with a form for comments and drew a general favorable reaction.

One doctor wrote: "This is an excellent approach to the frequently seen misuse and abuse of drugs, drug reactions, interactions, accidental and deliberate overdose."

Said another: "Pharmacy monitoring of drug therapy is especially useful in an old chronic care patient on several drugs ... unnecessary complications can be prevented in this way."

The monitoring program by pharmacists has since been expanded to cover dispensing of certain drugs in five hospital wards. Long-term objective is to have the program cover the hospital.

Where patients leaving hospital have a complicated routine of medication to maintain, the pharmacists prepare for them a chart showing which drugs are to be taken and when.

Mallard Appointed

Derrick Mallard, 6002 West Saanich, chairman of the court of revision for School District 63 in 1974, has been appointed to the provincial assessment appeal board for 1975.

He is also president of the Citizens' Association to Save the Environment.

Others appointed are Peter Jenewein of Albion, B.C., chairman, and J. Y. Gardner, West Vancouver.

The appointments were made in cabinet orders released Friday.

Pats Return On Feb. 9

Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, 3rd Battalion, will return to Work Point Feb. 9 from joint Canadian-U.S. manoeuvres in Alaska.

The battalion has about 90 men taking part in the exercise designed mainly to test procedures as well as logistical support of Alaskan Command forces, a Canadian Forces spokesman said.

Working Mothers Worry About Curtailed School

The one-hour school day proposed by Greater Victoria school board in case of strike or lockout will have a direct impact on most parents.

"In my estimation it's going to be a great hardship," said Sheila Vradenburgh, president of the Lampson Street elementary school parents' association.

"I'm a working mother and I'm definitely concerned," Mrs. Vradenburgh said.

She said her youngest child is 9 years old so she doesn't have the babysitting problems that working mothers of younger children will be faced with.

"What I'm thinking of more is the educational loss they'll have without the supervision of a teacher," she said.

The board announced Friday that if its non-teaching staff are locked out or go on strike, schools will open for an hour each morning during which teachers will hand out assignments. "This is going to pose a great problem," aid Peggy Bridges, president of the George Jay elementary Home and School Association.

Nearly half George Jay's roughly 740 pupils have working mothers, she said, and these mothers will find it almost impossible to get babysitters to care for the youngsters while they're at work.

"Naturally our children are going to fall behind in their work," she added.

Alan Henley, chairman of the parents' advisory council to Central junior secondary school, said he expects parents will be upset.

"Part of the stability of the home is that children can count on certain things," Henley said, and going to school is one of those things.

"Children belong in school," he said.

A two or three-week strike or lockout will cut a fairly big slice out of the school year, he said, particularly at Central where students have just started a new semester.

Henley said he thought single parents will suffer most from the problem of children out of school.

Irene Jones, president of the Willows elementary Parent Teacher Association, said she will be hit by the one-hour school day less than will be working mothers.

"It won't make that much difference to me," she said.

"We've lived through this once before and we survived it," Mrs. Jones added.

She said the length of the strike will make a big difference in how much children's schoolwork is hurt. If it's only a week or so it won't matter much, she said.

The school board's janitors and custodians, Local 382 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, went on strike for three weeks two years ago, causing partial closure of the schools.

Hospitals Get Nod

Victoria General Hospital and Mount St. Mary Hospital have both received full accreditation for the next three years.

Accreditation is granted by the Canadian Council on Hospital Accreditation, based in Toronto, and means the hospitals have met national standards of hospital maintenance and patient care. Each hospital is inspected and its procedures examined before a council representative recommends for or against accreditation.

Earlier this week Mount Tolmie, St. Mary's Priory and Glengarry Hospitals received word they had also won full accreditation.

Accreditation inspection at Royal Jubilee Hospital is not due until this fall.

Change Your Lifestyle . . . and Start Living

max low

When I was quite young, my mother bought me a copy of Norman Vincent Peale's "Power of Positive Thinking" — and insisted that I read it.

Her worry was that I never was a very positive youth. And her hope was that the good doctor's philosophies would set me on the road to believing in myself, and to realizing that if one believed enough that something would happen then, sure enough, it would. Happen, that is.

The trouble was, though, despite much of Dr. Peale's fine advice, it became more and more difficult over the years to be positive in an increasingly negative world.

The other day, however, I met a truly "positive" man and it was a refreshing change.

He's Dr. Charles Aharan and he wants to develop a health care service "based on a positive concept of health and utilizing a small multidisciplinary team as a method of delivery."

And he's positive his scheme, a pilot one and the first of its kind in B.C., will work.

But he's not kidding himself. The road ahead is tough. And he knows it.

What's a "positive concept of health," anyway?

"Well," explains Dr. Aharan, "the greatest health problem existing today is the problem of sickness that results from the way we live, from lifestyles. The most important thing is not the removal of communicable diseases but reduction of illness that results from environment and lifestyles.

"And so we are concerned with offering a program that is aimed at reducing the sickness-producing lifestyle as well as treating sickness."

The "we" part of the plan are Dr. Alan Clews, Dr. Ron Lang and Dr. Aharan and his wife Marg. And they are teaming up to provide a sort of re-orientation program for what they call "middle-class" people with an alcohol or drug dependency problem.

The 50-year-old Aharan, a clinical psychologist, has devoted more than 25 years of his life to the problem of alcohol and drug abuse and to the treatment of chemically-dependent people. He's so certain his scheme will work that he has resigned his position as director of research and planning for the provincial Alcohol and Drug Commission to embark on his new venture.

Clews and Lang are both general practitioners who will work on the program on a part-time basis. Marg Aharan is, says Charles, a lay counsellor trained in this field and specializing in group therapy.

The doctors have applied to use part of Oak Bay Manor, the $5.5 million retirement home on Cadboro Bay Road, for their re-oprientation centre. Manor manager Ian Else has sent the application on to the Oak Bay council and there the matter rests, awaiting a public hearing and possible zoning change. But that isn't even Aharan's main problem.

You see, he's been through this mill before, having run a similar centre at Collingwood Acres near Edmonton for two years before coming to B.C. That was a success "from results attained" but, says Aharan, it failed because of inadequate financial support." And that's the sticky problem here, too.

. . . tough road ahead

"Because the economics of the health care system are all focused around the idea of treating diseases, it's tough to get economic support to change lifestyles," the doctor points out.

Aharan has asked the B.C. Alcohol and Drug Commission to subsidize people to attend the program. He believes it will, although the commission has given no guarantee — yet.

"We also hope the health care system may be persuaded to test out this scheme through health care insurance," he says.

At the moment, the only way people could avail themselves of the program is to pay for it themselves.

"We calculate it will cost $35 a day to treat a patient," says Aharan, "and that's quite cheap compared with the Eric Martin Institute, which was $90.70 a day the last time I checked."

Because, as the doctor points out, the majority of facilities available already in B.C. are geared toward "the homeless and socially-deteriorated person" the new plan is aimed at helping middle-class people.

"We are mostly concerned with legalized drugs — alcohol, tranquilizers and sleeping pills — and it's the middle-class people legally supplied these chemicals who are the overwhelming majority of abusers," Aharan says.

It's not just for alcoholics and drug users, though, Aharan feels the program should be made available to "all troubled people" and the doctors will involve themselves with family problems and marriage counselling.

A total of 28 patients will stay at the centre for a 28-day course and after that each patient will attend three "renewal weekends" at three-month intervals after his discharge to see how he is making out.

Many, including businessmen and housewives, will be sent to the centre by their doctors but Aharan hopes that a large number will be "problem employees" referred by big companies. Only those who are "dry and physically capable of functioning under a rigorous program" will be admitted.

A typical day will begin at 8:30 a.m. with a meeting directing the patients' attention to the program of that day. Then there will be discussion-lectures, body sensory programs such as Yoga, group psycho-therapy, films with an introduction to Alcoholics Anonymous, and finally self-awareness exercises.

The whole thing, says Aharan, is structured around getting the patient to help himself. At the end of each day he will write a log of the events when he will be expected to answer such questions as "Well, how did you do today, Joe? When did you get mad? How did you feel?"

It's all designed to get people to break their dependency on chemicals and to help them appreciate life.

"Being healthy isn't just the absence of disease, you know," ventures Aharan. "The more fulfilled you are, the more you live up to expectations, the more healthy you are.

"Health services are geared toward saving life, prolonging life — and this is terrific — but the real health problem now is discovering the technology that contributes to the quality of life."

business

Great-West

Record sales of $3.5 billion of life insurance and annuities in 1974 were reported by Great-West Life, an increase of 26 per cent over the previous year.

J. W. Burns, company president, reported following a board of directors meeting that business in force as of Dec. 31, 1974, totalled $22.7 billion, up 19 per cent over 1973.

Net income before policyholder dividends amounted to $41.978 million. Net income attributable to shareholders totalled $16.072 million or $8.03 a share compared with $13.568 million or $6.78 a share in 1973.

At the same meeting the board also approved the payment of a quarterly dividend of 75 cents a share on the capital stock of the company payable Feb. 28 to shareholders of record at the close of business Feb. 14.

Placer

Placer Development Ltd. has reported consolidated net earnings for the year ended Dec. 31 of $42.5 million or $3.54 per share, including extraordinary items of $3.1 million or 26 cents a share.

In 1973, net earnings were $71.8 million or $5.98 a share, including extraordinary items of $12.7 million or $1.06 a share.

The company's annual report says income declined primarily because of lower earnings by its Gibraltar Mine near Williams Lake, hit by a lengthy strike, poor world market conditions and reduced extraordinary income.

Bethlehem

Bethlehem Steel Corp., the second-largest United States steelmaker, reports its profits increased 65 per cent last year, setting earnings and sales records.

While Bethlehem's increase is a substantial rise, it still is below the figures reported by U.S. Steel Corp., whose earnings rose 92 per cent last year over 1973.

Bethleham disclosed it earned $342 million or $7.85 a share on sales of $5.45 billion in 1974 compared with $206.6 million and $4.72 a share on $4.18 billion sales in 1973, the previous record high.

Even so, Bethlehem complained that the profit return on its investment wasn't that good, although improved. It said the return equalled 6.3 cents on a dollar, up from last year's 4.9 cents, but still below the record 8.5 cents set in 1955.

Bethlehem, like U.S. Steel, raised prices substantially, but cut some of its hikes after President Ford complained they were contributing to the continuing inflation while the U.S. was in an economic slump.

U.S. Steel's profits announcement noted that they topped a 17-year-old earnings record by more than 50 per cent.

The largest steel-maker in the United States reported earlier that it earned $634.9 million, or $11.72 a share, on sales of $9.34 billion for the year. Earnings were up 92 per cent from the $325.8 million, or $6.01 a share, returned in 1973 on sales of $7 billion.

Hudson's Bay

Hudson's Bay Oil and Gas Co. Ltd. reports 1974 net earnings of $58.4 million or $3.07 per common share, compared with $39.4 million or $2.07 per share in 1973.

Funds generated from operations were up 23 per cent to $91.5 million or $4.83 per common share compared with $74.6 million or $3.93 per share for the previous year.

D. C. Jones, company president, said the large gains overstate the real results of the year's operations because they were derived in part from a net reduction in hydrocarbon reserves.

A major part of the profits reported from the liquidation of these assets will be offset by higher replacement costs, he said.

Coseka

Coseka Resources Ltd. reports net income of $139,978 for the three months ended Oct. 31, 1974, compared with $57,034 in the same period of 1973.

The income in the latest quarter included an extraordinary item of $114,616, the gain on the sale of securities by a subsidiary. The income was reduced by a minority interest of $20,751.

In the comparable 1973 quarter extraordinary items accounted for only $206 and minority interest for $450.

The company also reported the discovery of two gas wells from seven projects financed by a German drilling fund.

One is in northeast British Columbia and is awaiting a service rig, while the other, also in B.C. under an Imperial joint venture, is at 7,000 feet and projected for 10,800 feet.

Craigmont

Craigmont Mines Ltd. reports net earnings of eight cents a share in its fiscal first quarter ending Dec. 31, compared with 36 cents a share in the same quarter of 1973.

Ross Duthie, company president, told shareholders at the annual meeting the decrease was due to lower copper prices and higher costs.

He said that although the annual report said all production was sold through 1975, there might still be a need for some cutbacks. Craigmont sells half its copper concentrate production in Japan and half in the United States.

"This month's discussions with buyers indicate that a reduction of sales may be necessary after May but, until the situation is clarified, no announcement as to cutbacks in production or employment can be made," Duthie said.

Duthie said the company is in a good position, better than many, to ride out the present market. "It has no debt, a good cash position, a good degree of flexibility in production and a highly skilled work force and staff," he added.

DIVIDENDS

YOUR TAXES

By I. H. ASPER

The Carter Royal Commission on Taxation recognized human instincts and the need to preserve incentives for productivity. It recommended that the top personal income tax rate be reduced from approximately 90 per cent, including provincial taxes, to 50 per cent.

The reason was that high income individuals are generally a pretty creative bunch and that their activity contributes mightily to social objectives as well as economic well-being.

The commission was aware that the high tax rates were encouraging the economic doers, risk-takers and entrepreneurs to divert their energy and imaginations from economic pursuits to things like safari picture-taking and other avocations which had no plus effect on Canada.

After all, the commissioners reasoned, why would anyone risk hard earned after-tax capital to start something new only to find that if he is unsuccessful he'll have legal difficulty in writing off his loss, while if he's successful and generates taxable income, say, 80 per cent of that income will be taken away in taxes.

It was also felt that the high personal rates encouraged otherwise productive individuals to divert too much of their time from income generating to income preservation through tax planning.

Unfortunately, the commission's objective hasn't been achieved. Although the top rates have been reduced, federally, the provinces haven't followed suit and we still have top rates in the high 70 per cent range and they cut in at a much lower income level and apply to much more income than before.

Thus high income individuals are still seeking tax relief through tax shelters of one kind or another.

One group in particular is hard hit and can find little relief — the practitioners of a profession. Some professions, like engineers, permit their members to incorporate their operations. This has the effect of applying the small business tax rate of 25 per cent to the first $100,000 of their earnings.

Most professionals aren't as lucky. Doctors, lawyers, accountants, and dentists in particular, are denied, by their professional governing societies, the right to incorporate.

To partially overcome this anachronism in tax treatment, in recent years these professionals have sought refuge through the incorporation of facilities or service companies. That is, they might set up a company which is owned by themselves or their families and which buys all their equipment, furniture and rents them plus office space to the practitioner, making a profit on the operation.

The effect is to reduce the professional income, which is taxed at high rates, and have that income earned by the facilities company, where it is taxed at a low rate.

There are many variations on the theme. The service company can take over all of the non-professional aspects of the practice — the billing of clients, providing staff, collecting receivables, doing the banking, paying the bills and so on, all at a reasonable profit, and with happy tax results.

The benefits are more than tax minimization. Estate planning objectives can be accomplished as well, since the company's growth in value is reflected in the hands of various members of the family and not the professional. The wife can be employed by the company and thus qualify for Canada Pension Plan as well as a company plan. The benefits are real and substantial.

In recent years revenue has, in some cases, attacked this type of tax planning and several cases have gone to court. In most instances, the taxpayer has been successful in defeating the revenue claim that these arrangements are an artificial sham.

However, some such schemes have been upset, where the taxpayers were either too enthusiastic in their attempt to divert personal income to the low-taxed company, or were sloppy in implementing the plan.

Now, revenue appears to have finalized its thinking on the subject and decided to stop fighting these arrangements if they are carried out within the framework of what the Tax Department considers reasonable.

The department has recently issued an Interpretation Bulletin on professional management corporations in which it partially spells out what it feels is reasonable. The department's view still appears somewhat stringent but progress has been made.

Taxpayers in the profession at least can now know that partial incorporation is possible and would be well advised to take advantage of that right.

But their main thrust should be directed toward convincing their professional governing bodies and provincial governments that full incorporation should be allowed. There are several ways in which the public can be protected from the corporate limited liability in cases of malpractice or professional negligence, and this has been done in several other jurisdictions with success.

Until the law is changed, professionals and their advisers will have to seek the advantages of the management or service company device in order to achieve partial relief from the illogical tax discrimination they suffer.

New Zealand condenses a world of scenery

By RALPH HUBLEY
Christian Science Monitor

AUCKLAND, N.Z. — Why travel 7,000 miles from North America or Tokyo or even 1,200 miles from Sydney to visit the handful of islands called New Zealand?

Because, aficionados answered, a three-week trip here could compare with a three-month tour of the world. From subtropical beaches and waving palms to snow-capped Alps and icy glaciers, New Zealand condenses a world of scenery.

Perhaps the greatest compliment I could give to this 1,000-mile strip of mountains, lakes, and beaches is that the enthusiasts are largely right.

I arrived in this land, where sheep outnumber people 20 to 1, with an unusually critical eye.

Could it be true that "the inlets along the rugged southwestern coast of South Island rival Norway's fjords?"

Flying into Milford Sound in a light plane from Queenstown is indeed an exciting experience as the pilot weaves around 9,000-foot peaks. But the drop to sea level at the bottom of a 5,000-deep, cold waters of the sound ft. cliff is breathtaking. The walled by jagged peaks seasonally streaked by gushing waterfalls could fool even a Norwegian.

But how about the Southern Alps that run nearly the length of South Island? Are they "the most beautiful mountains in the world" as one veteran traveler unequivocally stated?

It's true that an artist would be hard put ot improve upon the view of 12,349-foot Mt. Cook from the Hermitage, a famed resort in Mt. Cook National Park. And, when a ski plane landed me on Franz Josef Glacier I felt quite out of this world. But I have been to the Swiss, French and Italian Alps. And I have seen Himalayan glaciers. I must say the experiences are nearly equal.

Then there is the thermal area around Rotorua where geysers, boiling lakes, and bubbling mud were claimed to be even more interesting than those on Iceland. What makes this area of value, however, is its Polynesian connection.

It is here where the largest concentration of Maoris live and work. For centuries they have used geothermal heat for bathing and cooking. They still occupy villages here and invite guests to visit them. You can also watch Maori carvers at work in the Arts and Crafts Institute and enjoy a Maori concert nightly.

My friends were also right in praising the Waitomo Caves, "a wonderland under rolling green hills", or the picturesque dairy farms; or the open cattle ranges; or the hundreds of miles of "unspoiled, empty beaches."

In fact it is easier to list what New Zealand does not have than to continue describing its features:

● There are no big deserts or wastelands as in Australia's great "outback" country. Indeed there is no place where the visitor is more than 70 miles from the sea.

● No pollution. Even in the capital city of Wellington, the constant wind scatters any fumes.

● No crowds. When Christchurch was host for the Commonwealth Games, I think many New Zealanders were as interested in the crowds as the events. There is very little traffic and plenty of gasoline and all types of housing accommodations.

New Zealand's visitors increased last year nearly 19 per cent over the previous year. But there is still much room for tourism growth without spoiling the uncrowded atmosphere.

Besides displaying much of the "scenery of the world" while being free from some of its problems, this "little bit of England in the South Pacific" offers other inducements to visit it.

Being isolated, it has some unique inhabitants.

The nocturnal Kiwi, New Zealand's national bird, has only rudimentary wings and no tail. Its eggs are enormous compared with the size of its body.

About 75 per cent of New Zealand's native plants are also unique. They include some of the world's oldest plant forms.

New Zealand's smaller islands are more oriented to the sea than North and South Islands.

Hilly and heavily forested Stewart Island, about 40 miles long and 20 miles wide, abounds in secluded bays and beaches with many colored sands and seashells. The island is also a bird sanctuary.

The Auckland Islands are uninhabited. Campbell Island in the sub-Antarctic was once farmed but now has only a manned weather and scientific station. The Snares, Antipodes, and Bounty Islands are sparsely settled.

On Chatham Island 500 miles east of South Island are both European and Maori settlers chiefly engaged in sheep farming and lobster and cod fishing.

Although I used the excellent air service of both New Zealand National Airways Corporation and Mount Cook Airlines, there is efficient coach and rail service throughout North and South Islands.

Travel Tips

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. — At one time you could have bought half of this desert town for a couple of thousand dollars. Which was the actual down payment made by Mrs. Nellie Coffman when she built the famous Desert Inn — long gone but not forgotten.

Southern Pacific owned a checkerboard of land: Every other square along the right of way. The government gave the alternate square miles back to the Indians thus making a hundred tribal members the richest Indians in America.

So we came down the other day (temperature 78 degrees) for the opening of the Canyon Hotel Racquet and Golf Resort. Price of this expensive layout—500 rooms was not given. But costs $57 a day. The 18-hole golf course goes for $20 a round. Tennis at $10 an hour. And a horse will scrape you through the cactus for $5 an hour.

But there is reasonable accommodation in the resort town.

There are 35 golf courses. Bob Hope's favorite. President Eisenhower spent so much time here that one year he personally cooked 26 barbecue dinner parties.

The town's permanent residents are only 27,000.

It's green around here — they your millions of gallons of water on this desert. Night club and three restuarants in the canyon. Decorations must have cost a fortune. But it's so new they didn't have Kleenex in the bathrooms yet. Room service is swift. Bell boys have that old pro look. They can size up the tip before you get your hand out of your pocket.

Hotel is operated by Americana, the hotel arm of American Airlines. And who do you think owns it? Mitsubishi, the giant Japanese conglomerate.

"We thought of moving to some desert community for my husband's health. . . ."

There's a whole bunch of desert but it's not all one big community. You can't just build a house anywhere — you have to have a water supply. And desert land doesn't come cheap. Even in the new communities like Lake Haven on the Colorado River.

There are advantages: Strict building controls. Strict building controls. "Thou shalt not cast a shadow on your neighbor's dwelling" — keeps most houses down to one level. Sometimes you can get up to three. But desert sun is what you bought. And nobody can build between you and the sunshine.

McDonald's can't get a humburger stant into Palm Springs. Decor is too garish for this town. Colonel Sanders Kentucky Fried Chicken got in. But they wouldn't let him put up the revolving barrel sign.

And there's summer heat that goes over the 100 mark. Lots of people have the money, lots of people own houses here permanently. But only 27,000 can stick it through those summer temperatures.

Winter population runs 75,000 or better.

That doesn't mean you wouldn't like it year round. There seem to be people who have to live by the sea. People who are only happy in the mountains. And then there are the desert people — the mystery writer Erle Stanley Gardner was a desert person. He wrote some desert books — non-fiction. Read them.
